HINDU LAW.

HINDU LAW—Gift—Construction—Absolute estate—Malik.

Semble: Words in a deed executed by a senior Thakur to a junior member that "you and your vansa varas are malikhs, mukhtiyars, dhanis" of a village, confer an absolute estate on the donee. ———Impartible estate — Acquisitions—Succession to—Hindu and Mahomedan Laws—Distinction— Non-talukdar's property — Oudh Estates Act (I of 1869), Ss. 8 and 10.

Unless there be a custom by which self-acquired properties in a Mitakshara family become part of the ancestral estate or unless it be shown that the acquirer intended to incorporate such acquisitions with the impartible estate of which he is the holder, they descend by the ordinary law of inheritance The onus of proving a custom dehors the general rule would lie on the person averting it. 40 I. A. 120 Ref. The Mahomedan Law however makes no distinction between ancestral and self-acquired property, and recognises no principle of differentiation in the matter of lineal and collateral succession. If therefore a custom of impartibility governs the succession to the ancestral estate, the presumption is that it attaches also to the personal acquisitions of the last owner left by him on his death. and it is for the person who asserts that these properties follow a line of devolution different from that of the estate to establish it. Where the name of the predecessor of a talukdar (a Mahomedan) was entered in the list 2 prepared under S. 8 of the Oudh Estates Act and the talukdar acquired properties subsequently, the non-talukdari property is presumably subject to the custom of devolution to a single heir This is so even if the talukdari estate is held under a primogeniture sanad. ———Impartible estate—Maintenance—Right to—Junior members—Customary right—Proof of unnecessary' if judicially recognised.

An impartible Zamindari is the creature of custom. It is of its essence that no co-parcenary in it exists. Apart therefore, from custom and relationship to the holder the junior members of the family have no right to maintenance out of it. 10 All. 272, 22 Mad 383 Rel. A custom entitling the sons of the holder to maintenance has so often been judicially recognised that it is not necessary to prove it in each case. 24 Mad. 147, Ref. There is no invariable custom by which any member of the family beyond the first generation from the last holder can claim maintenance as of right 5 Cal. 259. Appr. Prima facie a lease for a term does not import any right to a renewal of it, On the contrary it prima facie implies that the lessee's right to the permises demised ends with the term. ——Ss. 4 and 43—Right to projection.

The definition of easement in the Act applies to a projection of eaves in a dry country as well to a country having abundant rainfall, the purpose of the eaves being only to discharge rain water. If a right to project eaves over a particular height has been acquired, the height can be raised so as not to throw increased burden on the servient tenement. (Scott, C.J. and Beaman, J.) ——S. 4—Right to bury in another's land is not an easement.

The right to bury in another's land does not fall within the general definition of "Easement." It cannot be deemed a right imposed for the beneficial enjoyment of land. The law does not recognize also an easement by prescription created by the mere fact that dead bodies are placed in graves on the land of another and permitted to remain there for the prescriptive term. The Court will not create a new species of easement if the easement claimed constitutes a nuisance. But where the owner of the land has acquiesced in the burial of dead bodies, a Court of justice may prevent the desecration of the graves. (Moorkerjee and Panton, JJ.) ——Ss. 4 and 18—Easement—Artificial structures—Drying clothes, etc.—User as of right.

Easements can be acquired over artificial structures such as flat masonry, or roofs of shops. These are lands within the meaning of S. 4. ———Ss. 7 and 18—Natural right—Right to light and air—Privacy—Easement by implication—Partition.

There is no easement for the free access of privacy. Every one may build upon or otherwise utilise his own land regardless of the fact that his doing so involves an interference with the light which would otherwise reach the land and building of another person. On the other hand, every man may open any number of windows looking over his neighbour's land, for the interference with a neighbour's privacy or with his prospect does not by itself, give the latter a cause of action, in the absence of other circumstances. If windows are opened, the neighbour may, by building on his own land obstruct the light which would otherwise reach them. Whether a grant of an easement arises by implication on a conveyance of land depends on the intent of the parties, which must clearly appear; in order to determine the intent the Court will take into consideration the circumstances attending the transaction, the particular situation of the parties and the state of the thing granted. This principle holds only where there is no express contract relating to the matter for, where there is a valid express agreement fairly made the law does not indulge in presumptions and the rights of the parties will be upheld according to the terms of such agreement; in such circumstances, no question arises as to grant of easement by implication. Where the owner of an entire tract of land or of two or more adjoining parcels employ a part thereof so that one derives from the other a benefit or an advantage of a continuous and apparent nature, and sells the one in favour of which such continuous and apparent quasi-easement exists, the easement being necessary to the reasonable enjoyment of the property granted, will pass to the grantee by implication. Ewart v. Cochrane, (1861) 4 Mac. H L. 117; Wheelden v. Burrows, 12 Ch. D. 31; Bayley v. G.W. Ry. & Co., 26 Ch. D. 434; Brown v. Alabaster, 37 Ch. D. 490; Watt v. Kelson, 6 Ch. A. 166; Swan v. Cotton, (1916) 2 Ch. 459, Rel. The same principle has been applied to partition of joint properties. On a severance of tenements by a partition of joint property, and in the absence of a contrary intention, expressed or necessarily implied, all such easements as are apparent continuous and necessary for enjoying any of the undivided shares when the partition was effected, pass to the co-parceners to whom such shares are respectively allotted in severalty. 14 C. 797; 26 C. 516; 6 B.H.C.R. 181; 14 B. 452; 28 M. 495. Every person has a right to do anything on his own land with regard to the diversion, storage or the uses of water in any way he chooses provided that he does not allow or cause that water to go upon his neighbour's land so as to affect it in some other way than the way in which it had been affected before. ——— —Ss. 7, 11 (1) and 22—Natural right—Water brought on land for cultivation—Right to discharge on land of lower proprietor—Easement—Injunction.

Per Sadasiva Iyer, J.—The term, "natural right of drainage" strictly so called covers only the right to allow rain water falling on land of a naturally higher level to drain off by surface flow along whatever lines the water could find its way on the neighbouring land. The right to drain off water brought according to the custom and usages of the country along irrigation channels upon the land may also be said to be a natural right. Per Phillips, J.—An owner of land can have no natural right to pass the water, which has come upon his land artificially to his adjoining land. Where the upper field is watered by an irrigation source, a right to pass such water away from the field cannot be a natural right but only a prescriptive or customary right. Under S. 22 of the Easements Act the easements must be exercised in the way least onerous to the servient owner and must at his request be confined to a determinate part of the servient heritage. Whatever may be the means adopted to let out the surplus, the owner of the tank, in such cases, cannot increase the storage capacity of his tank beyond the capacity at the beginning which, in many cases can only be proved by the customary flow of water. ———S. 7, Illus. (g)—Riparian rights—Extent of.

Having regard to the necessities of a tropical agricultural country like India, Indian Courts should be liberal in recognising irrigation rights as natural rights of as strong a character as any other, provided the lower riparian owners are not injured and the equality and the wide participation of the benefits of the natural stream are not interfered with. In India a riparian owner must be confined to the land which is on the bank of the stream or which extends from that bank to a reasonable depth inland. A depth of more than half a furlong would usually be unreasonable. The right of a riparian owner is not restricted to lifting up of water from a natural stream and carrying it at once to the land but extends to the temporary storage of water in wells before carrying it on to the irrigated lands. (Sadasiva Aiyar and Phillips, JJ.) EMANI LAKSHMINARASU v. SECRETARY OF STATE. 34 M.L J 223= 7 L.W. 1=43 I.C. 113=23 M.L.T. 235.

———S. 7, Illus. (g)—Surface water—Right to collect and use—Right to let water on lower land—Rights of servient owner.

Every land-owner has a natural right to collect and retain upon his own land the surface water not flowing in a defined channel and put it to such use as he may desire. He may also allow it to flow away in the usual course of nature upon the lower lands of his neighbour and cannot be bound to prevent it from so doing. He cannot do this, however by an artificial discharge upon his neighbour's land unless he has acquired an easement which his neighbour is bound to submit to. If he should acquire such an easement the owner of the servient tenement acquires no reciprocal rights as against the owner of the dominant tenement with regard to the flow of surface water, that is, water not passing through a defined channel. The owner of the servient tenement cannot compel the owner of the dominant tenement to continue the exercise of his right even where the right has been exercised uninterruptedly for over 20 years, and even if its exercise should be beneficial to the servient tenement. Arkright v. Gill, (1839) M. & W. 208; Don v. *Shrewsry Ry. ——S. 7, Illus. (j)—Riparian right—Artificial stream connected with natural stream—Grant of right—One riparian proprietor to another riparian proprietor—Right to divert water outside tenement.

Riparian proprietors can permanently divert water for agricultural purposes and irrigation. The question is whether the use was reasonable having regard to the custom of the adjoining country. Where there is no sufficient water for all to use freely, each riparian proprietor should take only his proportionate share determined by the number of such owners and the area for which water is supplied by each. The right of a riparian owner to irrigate is not a right to easement properly so called. The statement in 28 Mad. 236 that the owner of a tenement adjoining a natural stream has no right to divert water to be placed outside the tenement goes too far. Where a riparian owner has made a diversion for the irrigation of his own tenement, the surplus water which would otherwise be wasted may be taken in a channel by another riparian owner to irrigate his land. The policy of the law should be to encourage and protect all beneficial use of the water. Where a riparian proprietor had by reason of long user since 1884, the right to divert water in the natural stream for filling his reservoir for irrigating his lands and had granted a portion of his right to this water to B another riparian proprietor and where B's right was obstructed in 1911. Held, that a suit instituted in 1915 was not barred by limitation. The obstruction whether the stream had continuous flow or not, is a continuing wrong within S. 23, Lim. Act. The incidents of a natural stream would also apply to an artificial water course supplied with water from a natural stream and the riparian proprietors of the artificial course would have the same rights as if the water course was a natural stream. ——S. 8—Lost grant—Presumption from long user—Way of necessity—Inconvenience.

Where it is found that the plaintiffs have used a path-way, without interruption, peaceafully, publicly and as of right, it may be presumed that the user had a lawful origin although the circumstances relating to the origin of this user may not be known. It may be presumed in such a case that the origin is traceable to a lost grant. As regards easement of necessity the general rule is that there cannot be such an easement in respect of a right of way, if there is an alternative route or way. But where the alternative route is extremely inconvenient, there may exist an easement of necessity in respect of a more convenient path-way. (C. C. Ghose and B. B. Ghose, JJ.) ——S. 11—Acquisition of easement right by tenant—Grant—User—Right to take water.

Although a tenant cannot acquire a prescriptive right of easement in land belonging to his lessor he may claim a right of easement based on immemorial user, as there is no reason why an owner of land should not grant any privilege he pleases to his tenant. Where the enjoyment of a right to take water from the landlord's tank was continued uninterrupted for a long series of years, such enjoyment should be attributed to a legal origin and the Court should presume a grant of an agreement. A tenant can establish his right to irrigate his field from his landlord's tank by proof of open and continuous user from time immemorial. 29 C. 868; 38 M.L.J. 29; 6 C. 394; 4 C. 633; 30 C. 281 Rel. The defts. had ancient right of easement to take water from a well in the plff.'s land; but that easement became extinguished by non-user for a period more than twenty years. The defts. later on repaired the well at their own expense with the permission of the plff. in order to irrigate their land and began to use the water for the purpose The plff. sued to restrain the defts. from using the water. Held, that the easement was not one of necessity, but an ordinary easement liable to be extinguished by non-user for more than twenty years under S. 47. The plff. practically granted a fresh easement to the defts. (Shah and Hayward, JJ.) ANANTA MURARAO v GANNU VITHU SURULKAR. 22 Bom L.R. 415 = 57 I.C. 143 = 43 Bom. 80.

——S. 13—Severance of tenement—Transference of a portion—Easement of necessity.

Where the owner of two tenements or of one tenement divided into two parts, transfers one part he puts an end by contract to the relation which he had himself created between the land sold and the land retained. He discharges the land so sold from any burden imposed upon it during his joint occupation; the condition of such land is thenceforth determined by the contract of alienation and not by the previous user of the former common owner during his common ownership. The question arises whether the defts. have easement of necessity because, where a man disposed of part of his land and those parts afford an accommodation will, upon severance, ripen into an easement, if it be such as to be absolutely necessary for the enjoyment of the part retained and the accommodation be such that it is capable of constituting the subject-matter of an easement. Where an owner grants part of his land and retains other part himself, although the grantee may be in a more favourable position than the grantor so far as the grantee may claim that "all easements of necessity" without which no enjoyment at all would be possible should be raised be implication in favour of the part retained. ——S. 13—Extent and nature of an easement of necessity.

An easement of necessity is one which the law creates according to the doctrine of implied grant in a particular case. It is one without which the dominant tenement cannot be used at all. A right of way of necessity ceases if the dominant owner can approach the place through his own land. (Mukerji, A.C.J. and Fletcher, J.) ABHOYA CHANDRA GHOSH v. RAI KUMAR GHOSH. 60 I.C. 804.

EASEMENTS ACT (V of 1882), S. 13.

———S. 13—Easement of necessity—Partition—Presumed grant.

As a right of easement of necessity arising out of a severance by partition arises from a presumed grant, no grant can be presumed where the rights of parties have been definitely settled in a partition suit. (Newbould, J.) SIBNATH SAHA v. MOHESH CHANDRA SAHA. 59 I C. 89.

Where the owner of one of two tenements originally held by a common owner, claims a right of way over the other tenement, held, that having regard to the enjoyment of the right of way for twenty years, there was a grant of the right of way to the plff. at the time of the severance of the tenements (Fletcher and Walmsley, JJ.) AUGRAHIT NAPIT v NABNATANNESSA BIBI. 49 I C. 798=29 C L.J. 51

———S. 13—Right of way—Grant implied on severance in cases of continuous easement.

Where two tenements had at one time belonged to the same person the Court can presume an implied grant from facts proved notwithstanding that the right claimed was a right of way along a path which was formed into a road though neither paved nor metalled and which appeared to have been permanently attached to and for the use of the dominant tenement. Assuming that the path came into existence after the severance, the fact that for about sixty years since, the tenant in possession of the dominant tenement had been using the path was sufficient to justify the Court in inferring that user had its origin in a grant not as a matter of legal presumption but as an inference of fact. On a severance of property a grant by the owner of one of the several portions to the owner of the other can be presumed. (Jenkins, C.J, and Chatterjee, J.) THAKUR MADAN MOHAN CHAKRABARTY v. SASHI BHUSHAN MUKHERJI. 31 I.C. 549= 19 C.W.N. 1211.

———S. 13—Easement of necessity—Use of way.

The fact that it is absolutely necessary for a person to use a way does not constitute an easement of necessity. (Holmwood and Chapman, JJ.) RAM GOPAL SEN v. ABHOYA CHARAN GHOSH. 26 I.C. 485.

———S. 13—Easement of necessity—Nature.

An easement of necessity is an easement not merely necessary for the reasonable enjoyment of the dominant tenement, but one without which that tenement cannot be used at all. There is ordinarily no reservation by implication of easement in favour of the grantor except in the case of an easement of necessity. (Mookerjee and Holmwood, JJ.) CROWDY v. REILLY. 17 I.C. 966=16 C.L.J. 417.

EASEMENTS ACT (V of 1882), S. 13.

Plff. and deft. owned a common courtyard. Before partition of the courtyard, plff. had the right to pass his water through the drainage which existed in the yard. Held, that the onus lay on the deft. to show that the right which plff. possessed prior to the partition had been extinguished by some agreement or rule of law. The mere fact that plff. had acquired another tenement through which he could pass his water did not deprive the easement in question of the character of an easement of necessity. (Shadi Lal, J.) BUTA SINGH v. LALLA. 53 I.C. 584=101 P.R. 1919.

———Ss. 13 and 42—Easement of necessity—Meaning of—Extinction of easement.

Easement of necessity is one without which the tenement cannot be used at all and not merely one which is necessary for its more convenient enjoyment. ———S. 13—Easement of necessity—When can be claimed.

A person cannot claim a right of way on the ground of convenience if he has other means of access available. An easement of necessity is an easement without which the property sold could not be used at all, and not one merely necessary for the more convenient enjoyment of the property. An easement of necessity contemplates that there must be an absolute necessity, not removeable by any thing, which the dominant owner can be reasonably expected to do before the law will compel an adjacent proprietor to submit to so detrimental a right as an easement on his land imposed against his will. 15 A. 270; 33 A. 467; 19 B. 79; 28 M. 495, referred to. Enjoyment.

The enjoyment necessary to qualify for a right of easement is something different from actual user. In order to establish a right to an easement, the enjoyment of it must continue for twenty years; but in the case of discontinuous easements, this does not mean that the actual user is to continue for the whole period of twenty years. On the contrary, there may be days and weeks and months, during which the right may not be exercised at all and yet during all those days and weeks and months, the person claiming the right may have been in full enjoyment of it when necessary: 30 C. 1077, Foll. Where the water of the plaintiffs' well was always used for irrigating the defendant's lands and there was user by the defendant whenever it was necessary for a period of more than twenty years, the right to irrigate from the well would be deemed to have been substantially enjoyed for the requisite period. ———S. 15—Enjoyment—Peaceable.

Peaceable enjoyment means one without interruption or opposition by the servient owner, sufficient to defeat the enjoyment. The mere fact that the land is waste does not necessarily show that no right can be acquired over such land. If that were so, the right of user over almost every pathway in the mofussil would be lost, inasmuch as almost every pathway lies over waste land. 18 C.W.N. 735, Ref. In determining the question whether an user of way over waste land was as of right or not, the Court would have to consider the character of the land, the relation between the parties and the circumstances under which the user took place. 8 C.W.N. 359, Ref. ———S. 15—Enjoyment—Two years next before suit—Prescriptive right—Creation.

A prescriptive right can be acquired only if the enjoyment of the easement ended "before the beginning of the three years next" before the suit was instituted. Enjoyment for twenty years under the prior Lim. Per Sadasiva Iyer, J.—A dominant owner, who has neither been obliged to resort to physical force to exercise his right of easement at any time nor has been prevented by use of force by servient owner from exercising such right at any time within 20 years expiring within two years before suit is enjoying peaceably notwithstanding oral disputes regarding it. Per Bakewell, J.—The adverb 'peaceably' indicates the manner in which dominant owner must conduct himself in his use of the servient tenement, i.e., the person claiming a right of easement must not have deprived the servient owner of that right by use of force or secretly. It is unnecessary to go into the questions of lost grant, acquiescence and so on, on the servient owner's part when the question of acquisition of statutory prescriptive right to easement under the Easements Act is considered. A statutory prescriptive title to an easement is impossible to be acquired under S. 15 unless and until the claim thereto has been contested in a regular suit. 10 A. L J. 227; 6 C. 394 (P.C.). Foll. EASEMENTS ACT (V of 1882), S. 15—Enjoyment.

Enjoyment for less than the prescriptive period entitles the persons enjoying, to an injunction against a trespasser. Plffs. had been taking water with the permission of the Govt. to a tank along a channel which mostly ran through Govt. Poromboke lands, but had for some years prior to suit not used this channel. On a suit being brought for declaration of their right against the defts. trespassers, Held, that the non-user by the plff. did not disentitle them to the relief as the deft. had no right either by grant or by prescription. The plff. were entitled to a decree restraining the defts. from interfering with the plffs. in their enjoyment of the channel and of the water flowing in it. (Seshagiri Iyer and Napier, JJ.) ANANDA DESIKACHARIAR v, VISWANATHA MUDALI. 30 I.C. 989=18 M.L.T. 515.

———S. 15—Enjoyment—'As an easement.'

The words 'as an easement' do not mean that the enjoyment should be in the assertion of claim of an easement. Illus. (b) shows that the words were used in order to show that unity of title or possession makes the possession useless to create a right of easement. Assertion of full ownership which however negatived by the evidence may suffice to establish an easement provided that the user was for the beneficial enjoyment of another land. (Sundara Iyer and Sadasiva Iyer, JJ.) KONDA REDDI v. RAMASWAMY REDDI. 38 Mad. 1=17 I.C. 112=6 L.W. 564.

———S. 15—Enjoyment—Acquiescence—If source of easement.

———S. 15—Enjoyment—Two years before suit—Easement of necessity.

When two houses originally owned by one and the same person have back yards opening into a lane which separates them, in the absence of evidence as to when the gates were opened the presumption is that they were so opened before severance and that the enjoyment of a right of way for over twenty years peaceably and as of right ending within two years before suit created a prescriptive right. ———S. 15—Enjoyment—Grant—Long user—Presumption.

Continuous and peaceable user of an easement of light and air for more than twenty years may give rise to a presumption that it existed with the consent of the owner of the servient heritage. 6 C. 394, Referred to. (Hallifax, A.J.C.) SONBA v. DATTATRAYA. 6 N.L.J. 89= 1923 Nag. 192.

———S. 15—Enjoyment—Light and air—"As of right"—Road or path—Open user—Presumption.

As easement of light and air need not be proved to have been enjoyed as of right, but under S. 15 of the Act, it is enough, if there is enjoyment without interruption for more than 20 years. An open user of a road or path, without interruption, for a long time, not under permission or sufferance, is prima facie evidence of enjoyment as of right. (Macnair, J.C.) HARI v. Mode of Enjoyment.

No presumption of a lost grant can be made in the case of the right of fishery where the use of the fishery was in harmony with the right of the public to fish by stakes which is acknowledged method of public fishing on the West Coast of India. Possession of the dar (space between two fishing stakes) for over sixty years does not perfect into an easement by way of prescriptive right since under the Easements Act claim to the soil under the fishery has to be made for a prescriptive right. (Marten, J.) LAKSHMAN v. RAMJI. 28 Bom. L.R. 939.

A plff. is entitled to have his right of way declared if he establishes the terminiz to and from which the way runs. (Fletcher and Shamsul Huda, JJ.) LAKHI KANTA v. RAJ CHANDRA. 45 I.C 374= 22 C.W.N. 922.

———S. 15—Mode of enjoyment—User—Legality.

No use of property which would be legal if due to a proper motive, would become illegal, if prompted by an improper or even a malicious motive. The extent of a right acquired by prescription is measured by the extent of the use and enjoyment thereof during the prescriptive period. (Mookerjee and Beachcroft, JJ.) JIBANANDA CHAKRABATI v. ———S. 15—Mode of enjoyment—Right to use of water—Nature of user.

It is not necessary to prove annual or continuous user, but only substantial enjoyment whenever the occasion required. The mere fact that the openings made were different in different years does not make the user indefinite when the channels through which the water was taken were the same. The fact that the owner of the subject tenement paid a certain sum for the repair of the embankment for his own benefit does not make the user permissive. while he was enjoying light and air through those windows the house was burnt down by fire in May 1905; but it was re-constructed immediately afterwards. In 1918 the defendants commenced to build, on their own land so as to block up the windows in the plaintiff's house. The plaintiff having sued to restrain defendants from obstructing the light and air through his windows, the defendants contended that the plaintiff had not acquired the easement for the prescriptive period, as there was an interruption in his enjoyment during the time the house was destroyed by fire. Held, overruling the contention, that the plaintiff had acquired the right of easement for his windows by prescription. Where the owner of a building, who is in the course of acquiring a right of easement by prescription, has his house burnt down, but begins immediately to re-build his house and places the windows exactly in the same position as the old ones, he can be regarded as enjoying the access and use of light and air continuously, and he will be entitled to protection after twenty years from the first building. If, however, there is any delay in re-building, then that might be evidence of an intention not to resume the user. (Macleod C.J. and Shah, J.) ———S. 15—Nature of obstruction—Right of way—Uninterrupted enjoyment—Onus.

Knowledge of the fact of enjoyment on the part of servient owner is essential to the acquisition of an easement where the Court is asked to presume a grant. Active obstruction on the part of such owner would negative any such presumption. To negative submission to an interruption the party interrupted need not have brought a suit. The question whether there has been submission to, or acquiescence, in an obstruction, is a question of fact the burden of negativing submission being on the party alleging that he did not submit. ———S. 15—Nature of obstruction—Actionable obstruction of lights—Nature of.

It is not enough, for supporting an action for obstruction of light that there has been a diminution of light from what it was before. Nature of Right.

All that a deft. whose eaves project over plff's land can acquire after 20 years is an easement imposing the burden on the servient tenement of having that projection over it. Even if he acquired the right to project his roof over the plff.'s land and to discharge rain-water over the plff.'s land, he could not acquire a title to the plaintiff's land. To impose an easement is to create an easement by voluntary act of the owner of a lease or any other person authorised to transfer an interest in the servient heritage. ———S. 17—Surplus water—Defined channel—Acquisition—Grant—Presumption—English and Indian Law.

A person acquires a right of easement of water of artificial channels or derived from artificial tank or pools. 7 M. 530, Foll. The water of a tank fed by rain water as well as surface water from neighbouring lands flowed in a defined channel from the defts.'s land through the land of the plff. who was not the owner of the tank. The defts. had been using and enjoying the said water for a sufficient length of time and as a matter of right. Held, that he must be deemed to have acquired a right of easement with respect to the same, notwithstanding the fact that the water was what might be called surplus water. In the circumstance of the case, a grant of the said right might be presumed. (Abdur Rahim and Bakewell, JJ.) BODDULURU NAGAYYA v. BACHU CHENCHU RAMAYYA. 33 M.L.J. 674=45 I.C. 625= (1917) M.W.N. 868.

———Ss 17 (c) and 15—Right to receive rain water through higher lands.

Considering the position of the lands and the conditions of agriculture in that part of the country it must be held that where the plaintiff had been enjoying the water by means of channels through which water passed to a tank, for a certain number of years no prescriptive right was acquired to receive the water through the channels unobstructed so as to entitle the plaintiff to seek the removal of these obstructions caused by the defendants. Per Macleod, C. J.—Although it is quite possible that the owner of one piece of land might acquire the right to drain his water on to the land of another, it would be more natural in hilly districts, such as the one in which the suit lands are situate, for the owner of the lower land to acquire a right to receive water which either falls on or flows into the higher land, it is only in such a way that cultivation in such districts can proceed and the owner of the land in the lower level can acquire such a right against the owner of the land on a higher level. ———S. 17 (c)—Right to take water through another's land.

The right to take water from a river running through an undefined channel over the neighbouring lands is not one coming under S. 17 (c) of the Act, but is a right which though perhaps could not be acquired by prescription as an easement, could be inferred from long user. A

A customary right of burial can exist, apart from provisions of Indian Easements Act; hence where it is found that a certain family used a grave as a burial ground customarily it was held not an easement but a customary right in the nature of an easement. 23 B. 666; 17 A. 87, Foll. (Piggott, J.) MATHURA PRASAD v. KARIM BAKSH. 31 I C. 803 = 13 A.L J. 1094.

———S. 18—Privacy—Custom in Gujarat, invasion of.

In the province of Gujarat there is a customary usage which makes an invasion of the privacy an actionable wrong, and a man may not open new doors or windows in his house or make any new apertures or enlarge old ones in a way which will enable him to overlook those portions of his neighbour's premises which are ordinarily secluded from observation. *(Macleod, C. ———S. 18—Customary easement — Overhanging trees.

A custom to allow the neighbour's trees to overhang one's house and premises, is neither definite nor reasonable. Whether the right to retain trees overhanging another's land is customary easement. (Shaw and Kemp. JJ.) JOSHI v. OKA. 43 Bom. 164 = 47 I C 629 = 20 Bom. L.R. 826.

A customary right is not an easement in the legal sense of that term. Customary rights have their origin in grant or prescription, but it is not necessary that in every case there should be evidence from which a lost grant may be presumed. Nor is it necessary that the custom should be traced back for the whole time necessary to make it immemorial. (Richardson and Suhrawardy, JJ.) ALI MAHOMED v. SHEIKH KATU. 36 C.L J. 280 = 1923 Cal. 200.

———Ss. 18, 15—Right by custom—Right by prescription—Distinction between.

What may suffice to establish a customary easement may be wholly insufficient to establish an easement by prescription and vice versa. The two rights are different although the result may be the same. ———S. 18—Water—Right to — Obstruct and direct channel—Extent of.

A person who is entitled to put up a dam of turf and loose stones, is not necessarily entitled to substitute a tighter and stronger dam. ———S. 18—Privacy—Extent of the right.

(Piggott, J.C.) MUHAMMAD SHABBIR v. MUHAMMAD JAWAD. 16 I.C. 270.

———S. 18—Customary easement—Power to take earth for repairs of house.

A custom by which earth is taken from a piece of waste land to repair houses in a village after inundations is not unreasonable. On the contrary, it seems to be an eminently reasonable custom that the people of the village should take earth from a ditch which serves no other purpose, in order to repair their houses. It was not shown that it was destructive of the subject-matter. (Ross, J.) BABU BIKOO MAHTON v. NARAYAN SAHU. 1924 P. 303.

A garden, over which an easement to enjoy it as a park, is created in favour of a community but the ownership and management of which is reserved to the owner descends in succession in the ordinary way, subject to the charge upon it. (Kincaid and Raymond, A.J.Cs.) LAKHAMBAI v. DEVIBAI. 59 I C. 673=14 S.L.R. 182.

———Ss. 22 and 23—Easement for a particular purpose—Conversion.

Easement confined to a particular purpose ought not to be extended to any other. A backdoor of a house which was occasionally used by the sweepers or the ladies of the house cannot be converted into a main entrance to be used by males. (Rafique, J.) JAMNA PERSHAD v. GOPINATH. 19 I.C. 984.

The general rule is that a right of way once defined cannot be altered and the dominant owner is entitled to exert his strict rights unless he can be induced to consent to a deviation. S. 22 of the Easements Act does not deal with the question whether the servient owner, when once the right of way has been defined, can substitute a new way and recourse must therefore be had to the common law. (Macleod, C.J. and Coyajee, J.) DHUNDIRAJ BALAKRISHNA PHALNIKAR v. RAMCHANDAR GANGADHAR KALE. 24 Bom. L.R. 437=1922 Bom. 407.

The owner of a private right of way is entitled to enter the way at one and the same place only, and not at any other. (Mookerjee and Beachcroft, JJ.) JIBANANDA CHAKRABARTI v. KALIDAS MULLIK. 42 Cal 164=20 C.L.J. 97=26 I.C. 213=18 C.W.N. 1296.

Under S. 22 of the Easements Act the dominant owner must exercise his right in the mode which is least onerous to the servient tenement and cannot impose any additional burden on it. Where the easement right is only to use a roof as an open space, the holder cannot build over that portion. (Abdul Qadir, J.) HANS RAJ v MALAWA MAL. 1924 Lah. 887.

———S. 23—Tiled roof — Pukka roof—Additional burden.

Deft. who had a right to discharge water from his thatched roof to the plff's. roof pulled down his house and built a three storied house with spouts, to discharge water on the plff.'s land. Held, that the burden on the plff.'s land was increased within the section. (Tudball, J.) DAMODAR DAS v. TILAK CHAND 80 I.C. 941=13 A.L.J. 791.

EASEMENTS ACT (V of 1882), S. 23.

———S. 23—Blocking of water channel—Power of Court to make new outlet.

———S. 23 — Easement — Alteration — Increase of burden.

No man can impose a new or increased restriction or burden on his neighbour by his own act and for this reason an owner of an easement cannot, by altering his dominant tenement, increase his right. The extension of the projection of a cornice beyond its original breadth and the consequent increase in the flow of rain water on the land of the servient owner are both an addition to the burden of the servient owner. (Mookerjee, O.J. and Fletcher, J.) SURESH CHANDRA BISWAS v JOGENDRA NATH SEN. 24 C.W.N. 896=58 I.C. 851= 32 C.L.J. 27.

———S. 23—Reconstruction of house— Roshandans—Blocking of.

Re-construction of a house by the dominant owner involving a change in the situation of the roshandans does not mean a fresh easement requiring a fresh period of twenty years for its acquisition. Hence the dominant owner is entitled to a mandatory injunction for demolishing the wall constructed by the servient owner so as not to obstruct the roshandans. 26 B. 374, Dist. (Chevis, J.) DHARAM DAS v. PIYARE LAL. 45 I.C. 985=98 P.W.R. 1918.

———S. 23—Easement — Extension of— Increase of flood through drain.

A person is not entitled to enlarge his right of easement by increasing the volume of water flowing through a drain through which he was entitled to discharge only the rain water and the ordinary waste water. (Le Rossignol, J.) RURA v. GAUDA RAM. 102 P.L.R. 1917= 42 I.C. 284=88 P.W.R. 1917.

Where the plff.'s right of way is proved over a defined track, occasional deviation therefrom does not affect his right. The prohibition of the user of the track during a particular season does not negative the claim of a general right of way, but is presumptive proof of a restricted right. (Sundara Aiyar and Sadasiva Aiyar, JJ.) ETHAMUKKALA KONDA REDDY v. SUBBA RAO. 18 I.C. 85.

The owner of the dominant tenement may raise the height of the eaves so long as he does not know an increased burden of the servient tenement, but the projection of the new roof should not exceed that of the old though at an increased height. If the dominant owner exceeds the right, injunction and not damages is the proper remedy. (Fawcett, A.J.C.) AYOOB ISMAIL v. NARBEAHMAD SULEMAN. 28 I.C. 169.

By the Civil Law the owner of a dominant tenement has a right to do whatever is requisite to secure to himself the fullest enjoyment of his servitude, so long as he does not impose any additional burden upon his servient heritage. (Knox, J.) LALA BALBIR SINGH v. AMAR SINGH. 39 I.C. 690 (2).

The accessory rights mentioned in S. 24 of the Act are not intended to deprive the servient owner of his rights of property unless such a result is absolutely essential. Where a plff. having a right to discharge rain water from eaves on defts'. land sued for an injunction restraining him from making any use of his land which would prevent plff. from going upon it for all purposes of repairing the wall of his house supporting the eaves, etc. Held, that the plff. could well repair the wall and the eaves from the inside and could not be granted an injunction. ———S. 24 — Adjoining house-owners— Right to go to neighbour's land to repair wall —Eaves.

Where the repair of the wall is reasonably necessary for its enjoyment, the right to go to the neighbour's side of the premises to repair the wall is a necessary easement. The right does not allow going over the deft.'s roof. A person can also enter his neighbour's house or land to protect his eaves which project over the neighbour's house. Where the same grantor conveys in the course of one transaction portions of his property, to several grantees, each grantee is presumed in law to take his portion subject to such rights as a right of way as are created in favour of the other grantees. ———Ss. 33 and 35—Disturbance of easement—Remedy— Damages — Interference by law.

Where an easement has been disturbed, plff. is entitled to an injunction rather than damages. He is not entitled to an injunction except in such cases where he would be entitled to recover damages under Chapter IX of the Act. S. 33 allows compensation to be recovered provided that the disturbance has actually caused a substantial damage to the plff. as explained in that section. De minimus Non-Curat lex.—The law does not concern itself with a disturbance which is trivial or immaterial. Where the plff. comes into Court at once, when the disturbance is threatened and the deft. completes his structures pending the suit, he does so at his own peril. ———S. 33—Suit for compensation—Parties.

It cannot be disputed that, as a general rule where a person claims a right of easement on a servient tenement all the owners of the servient tenement ought to be made parties, as any decree in the absence of a necessary party declaring a right of easement would be infructuous. But there are cases which may well be taken as exception to the general rule, such as where any of the co-sharers took no part in obstructing the plaintiff's right. It is only substantial privation of light enough to make the occupation of the house uncomfortable, according to the ordinary notions of mankind which gives rise to an actionable claim. In the case of business it is necessary that the plff. should be prevented from carrying on his business as beneficially as before. The fact that light received has become less, gives no right. The dominant owner acquires by prescription so much light as is sufficient for the ordinary purposes of inhabitancy or business according to the ordinary notions of mankind with reference to the locality and surroundings concerned and the amount received during the period of prescription is immaterial. The right to open and shut windows and shutters into adjoining land can be acquired as an easement. The owner of such an easement is entitled to restrain the servient owner by an injunction from interfering with his rights of easement by erecting a wall or a building close to the boundaries. ——S. 38—Continuous easement—Cesser of enjoyment.

——S. 48—Increase in burden—Onus of proof—Second appeal.

The owner of an easement is precluded from increasing his right on the alteration of his dominant tenement. In a case, where by change of height, eaves discharge water with increased force, it is held that an additional burden is put upon the plff.'s land; in order to disprove the fact of additional burden on the servient tenement and obtain an easement over it, the owner of the dominant tenement has the onus of proof and has no right to produce expert evidence for the first time in second appeal. ——S. 43—Right to drop water from eaves.

He increased the height three times and allowed water to drop through pipes. Held that his easement was extinguished by the increase in burden. (Adami, J.) The defts. had ancient right of easement to take water from a well in the plff.'s land ; but that easement became extinguished by non-user for a period more than twenty years. The defts. later on repaired the well at their own expense with the permission of the plff. in order to irrigate their land and began to use the water for the purpose. The plff. sued to restrain the defts. from using the water : Held, that the easement was not one of necessity, but an ordinary easement liable to be extinguished by non-user for more than twenty years under S. 47. Once the existence of an easement is proved as against Govt., the Govt. must show under S. 47 that it interrupted that easement more than twenty years ago or that the plff. rendered its use impossible. Mere failure on plff.'s part to repair the breach is not enough. If the Govt. wished to claim right to water flowing through pattah land they can do it only when classifying the bed separately as poramboke ; otherwise the ryot can retain as his property. ———Ss. 50 and 22—Scope.

Every land-owner has a natural right to collect and retain upon his own land the surface water not flowing in a defined channel and put it to such use as he may desire. He may also allow it to flow away in the usual course or nature upon the lower lands of his neighbour and cannot be bound to prevent it from so doing. He cannot do this, however, by an artificial discharge upon his neighbour's land unless he has acquired such an easement which his neighbour is bound to submit to. If he should acquire such an easement, the owner of the servient tenement acquires no reciprocal rights as against the owner of the dominant tenement with regard to the flow of surface water, that is, water not passing through a defined channel. The owner of the servient tenement cannot compel the owner of the dominant tenement to continue the exercise of his right even where that right has been exercised uninterruptedly for over 20 years and even if its exercise should be beneficial to the servient tenement. Before the right to the use of water can be the subject of an easement by prescription or grant it must be water flowing through a defined and permanent channel. The essential features from which a grant or arrangement whereby the right claimed may be presumed to rest in some legal origin are that there should be a permanent channel, artificial or otherwise, or indeed a defined channel of any sort conducting the overflow of water and that the overflow should be controlled or directed in any particular course. 6 I. ———S. 51—Dominant tenement rebuilt—Additional burden—Whether can be imposed.

When a dominant tenement is rebuilt, the dominant owner has no right to impose a greater burden on the servient tenement than the prescriptive quantity of the right enjoyed. Blocking up an old window and building another of the same dimensions in another place is an imposition of a burden on the servient tenement which was not existing till then. But the right of the dominant owner under the common law to free access of light and air through an ancient window is not lost by shifting the window backwards or forwards (Pratt, J C. and Crouch, A.J.C.) An appropriation of the land licensed to any use inconsistent with the enjoyment of the license works a revocation and the licensee may maintain an action for damages against the licensor for breach of contract in unlawfully revoking it. A license to catch elephants for consideration is not revocable for it is a license coupled with an interest. Where there is a grant of an exclusive right to catch elephants within a specified area for a specified period it does not follow as a matter of course that the grantee would be entitled to exclusive occupation of the entire territory during that time. ——— Established church—Ordinary Courts of law—Roman Catholic Church—Voluntary association—Rules of Branch association different from parent body—Custom—Proof of.

The Church of England is an established church and is therefore subject to the ordinary

ECCLESIASTICAL LAW.

Courts of law in matters temporal as well as matters of doctrine. The Roman Catholic Church is not an established Church but a voluntary association and any member who joins that church will be bound by any rules which it has framed for its internal discipline and management. If a branch of voluntary association has adopted rules which materially differ from those of the parent body, the members of that association will not be members of the parent body but will be an independent organisation with their own rules. The Canon Law recognises no distinction between the spiritual and temporal powers of the Papacy and the Episcopate, and a member of any church which is part and parcel of the Universal Catholic Church would be bound by the Canon Law. If a church while adopting in the main the doctrine of the Catholic Church has yet framed rules different from the rules of the Catholic Church in matters of discipline and management, those rules must be proved in the same way in which a custom would have to be proved in a Court of Law. Questions of custom though they may, in the end, become questions of law are at the outset necessarily questions of fact. (Ayling and Coutts-Trotter, JJ.) GASPARI LOUIS v. REV. FR. O P. According to English law, customary rights have all features in common viz., that however large the community enjoying them and however frequent the exercise of the right, they never amount to a continuous and complete deprivation of the owner of the soil of his natural right of user and further the custom has always arisen in the close and has no other origin The congregation has no power to select what canons to follow and what to disregard or to adopt rules for the conduct of ceremonial observances at variance to the canons of the church so long as they profess allegiance to the same. 1 Moo. P.C. 411 (N.S.); 7 A.C. 484, Expl. A Bishop, with absolute right of control over his flock cannot contract himself out of his rights prospectively so as to prevent his successors from exercising the same authority. ———Burden of proof—Title—Possession—Proof of—Presumption.

It is only in cases where there is no evidence of the plaintiff as to dispossession or, what amounts to the same thing, where the evidence is valueless, that the plaintiff fails to make out his case by merely proving that he had an antecedent title and possession. If from the evidence given by both sides the Court has a difficulty to come to a definite conclusion or if the Court considers that evidence is not altogether satisfactory, in such circumstances, the Court can give weight to the probabilities of the case or to any presumption which might properly arise from the fact that the plaintiff had previously been in possession and had title (Miller, C.J. and Mullick, J.) A person in possession can resist a suit for ejectment against all but the true owner, though his possession is that of a trespasser. He can resist the suit on the ground that the assignment to the plaintiff is a sham transaction. 15 Bom. 1, Rel. upon; 36 B. 37, Expl. (Ayling and Hannay, JJ.) ELECTION.

———Temple committee—Meeting—Notice of—Want of quorum—Adjourned meeting.

With very limited exceptions where a special meeting of a committee or any other body has to be specially convened for a particular purpose every member of that body ought to have notice of and a summons to the meeting. The election, being by a definite body on a day of which, till summons, the electors had no notice, they were all entitled to be specially summoned, and if there was any omission to summon any of them, unless they all happened to be present, or unless those not summoned were beyond summoning distance, as for instance, abroad—there could not be a good electrol assembly. A meeting of a temple committee for the election of trustees for a temple was adjourned for want of quorum and no notice of the adjourned meeting was given to the other members of the committee. On the adjourned date the election was held. Held, that the election was invalid for want of notice of the meeting to the members of the committee. (Marten and Fawcett, JJ.) NILKANTH DEVRAO v MURARI GOVIND. 26 Bom. L R. 315=1923 Bom. 272.

———Temple trustees—English law non-applicability—Voters' lists.

The common law of England relating to Parliamentary elections should not be applied to regulate the election of temple trustees in India, though the principles which underlie that law may be invoked if they appear to the Court to be in conformity with the rules of justice, equity and good conscience. The fact that persons whose names were not in the list of voters participated in the election did not invalidate the election in the absence of anything to show that the right depended on an entry in the voters' list. (Mookerjee and Chotzner, JJ.) RAGHUNATH SARMA v. JIBAN CHANDRA SARMA. 27 C.W.N. 312=50 Cal. 202=1923 Cal. 457.

———Number of votes recorded exceeding maximum—Election void.

The rule that when the number of votes recorded exceeds the maximum that can be given at an election must be void, is perfectly sound, especially when there are no rules to meet such a contingency. Where the voting paper is void on the face of it, no evidence should be allowed to vary the recorded voting paper. (Sanderson, C. J. and John Woodroffe and Mukerji, JJ.) NAGENDRANATH v. J. VAS. 60 I C. 547=32 C.L J. 124.

———Validity of—Infringement of rules.

Where rules have been framed for the conduct of elections, they may be either mandatory or directory. An infringement of the former class of rules avoids the election. Where an infringement of a directory rule is proved, the burden rests upon those who maintain the validity of an election notwithstanding the infraction of the rule, to show that the result ———Election agent, can be proposer—Punjab Government Notification No. 9 of 31—7—1920, Regulations 7 and 11—Punjab Electoral Rules, Rr. 5 (4), 31, 34 (2) (a) and 42 (1) (c)—Amendment of petition—Nomination paper delivered before day fixed is not invalid.

The election agent of a candidate can be his proposer or seconder and vice versa. The Election Commissioners can allow further or better particulars to be furnished subsequent to the petition provided no new substantive charge is introduced and that the respondent is not taken by surprise. Where the returned candidate is declared duly elected on a single nomination paper and the validity of the election is questioned on the ground that it was delivered to the Returning Officer before the time fixed, the Commissioners have power to decide the point irrespective of the fact whether the point was raised before the Returning Officer, Regn. 7 of Punjab Notification, No. 9, dated 31—7—1920 is ambiguous but as it is a disabling provision it must not be strictly construed against the nominee. The Regulation does not mean that a nomination paper delivered to the Returning Officer before the day fixed is invalid when the question of the falsity of the return of expenses comes before the Commissioners, they have power to decide the same. ———Corrupt practice — Particulars—Amendment of Petition—Candidate and Agent —Punjab Electoral Rules, R. 31.

An election petition alleging corrupt practices on the part of the candidate cannot be summarily rejected for want of fuller particulars. An opportunity should be allowed for further and better particulars to be given. The object of furnishing such particulars is to avoid surprise to the respondent and from that point of view they are necessary in the interests of justice. A candidate is responsible for the acts of those who, to his knowledge, for the purpose of promoting his elections, canvass for him. ELECTION.

———Candidate and agent—Punjab Electoral Rules, R. 42 (1) (b).

The relationship of candidate and agent is much wider than that of principal and agent and such relationship is to be inferred from facts. Where several voters were fed on the polling day by persons intimately connected with a candidate and acting on his behalf, the inference is clear that they are fed to induce them to vote for the candidate. (Kennaway, Abdul Qadir and Dalip Singh, J. Cs.) RAJMAL v. LAJPAT RAI. 61 I.C. 353.

———Form of petition—Amendment—Corrupt practice particulars to be given.

The particulars of any corrupt practice alleged must be given in the election petition. The English Law in this respect has not been followed. The rules in India do not prescribe any form in which an election petition is to be drafted and a d aft in the form given at page 415 of Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. XII, or in the form given for a plaint in the C.P. Code, Election Commissioners can allow amendment of an election petition where it is sought to bring home a corrupt practice to any one it is the action of that person which must be primarily looked to. A spiritual leader can canvass for a candidate provided he holds out no threat or inducement. Indian courts should administer the Indian Election Law and not the English Common Law. ———Bribery and Personation—Irregularities—Electing officer empowered to decide objection — Decision, questioned in a Civil Court.

At an election of a temple trustee, the agent of the successful candidate abetted the false personation of a dead voter. There was no proof that the candidate authorised or ratified the agent's act but the inclusion of his vote did not affect the result of the election: Held, that the false personation did not invalidate the election, though the vote included ought to be rejected. (Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.) The Common Law of England relating to Parliamentary elections cannot govern the election of a temple trustee. The fact that certain voters were carried to the voting booth at the expense of a candidate does not vitiate the election. (Per Napier, J.) Personation by itself does not invalidate the election. The number of votes given by personation should be struck off. An election is not void because the agent of a candidate had been guilty of one or two cases of bribery. (Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J., Napier J, contra) Where the electing officers were given the power to decide the objections as to personation and to allow or to disallow the votes at their discretion. Held, that the decision given by the electing officers honestly on the objections raised cannot be questioned by any proceedings in Court. The ring had been pledged to a third party a few days after the petition was put in. The plaintiff failed to get anything for his debt in the insolvency proceedings, and then brought a suit against the pledgee for return of of the ring or its value. Held, in treating the value of the ring as a liquidated debt for purposes of the insolvency proceedings, plff. had already elected to abandon all rights to the ring and as such the action cannot lie. Moreover the pledgee had obtained a good title on the principle of estoppel feeding the title. (Schwabe, C.J., Oldfield and Ramesam, JJ.) SINNAN CHETTY v. ALAGIRI AIYAR.

The licensee can discontinue the supply of energy if the consumer's installation is defective. In case of any alleged defect, the licensee can refer the matter to an electric inspector and he is to decide the matter. ———S. 39—Theft of electricity—Avoiding metre.

The use of the word 'mains' for the words 'any electric supply-line through which energy is supplied by the licensees' in S. 39 in a notice issued by the Municipal Engineer to a person accused of theft of energy under S. 39, would operate as an admission against the Municipality and would be a good defence to a criminal charge under S. 379, I.P.C. for theft. Where the word "mains" is qualified by such words as "outside, your metre" the accused gets full notice that he must not take current except through the metre. The word "dishonesty" is a legal expression having the same sense as that in which it is used in the Penal Code. (Holmwood and Chapman, JJ.) CARL FORSTMAN v. H. T. S. FORREST.

Appreciation of.

———Appreciation of—Portion of evidence false.

It is not safe to assume that a case must be false if some of the evidence in support of it appears to be ambiguous or is clearly untrue. ———Appreciation of—Presumption against misconduct to be considered.

Presumption against misconduct is among the probabilities to be taken into account in estimating the value of evidence and where the character and position of the person is above reproach this probability becomes stronger. The mere fact that this or that thing in a complete transaction is improbable does not count for much as against clear and distinct evidence of reliable witness. EVIDENCE—Circumstantial Evidence.

Circumstantial Evidence.

——— Circumstantial Evidence—Affirmative proposition — Conflicting evidence—Necessary for establishing the proposition.

The fact that witnesses contradicting an affirmative proposition, are not reliable is not sufficient to establish the proposition. The proposition that a person consented to a compromise is an affirmative proposition and if it is asserted by some witnesses and denied by others, it would be perfectly legitimate to take into consideration the circumstantial evidence with a view to show that the evidence of the first class of witnesses was true and that the other class was false. (Lord Atkinson.) SARAT KUMARI DASI v. AMULLYADHAN KUNDU. 32 M.L.T. 137= 17 L.W. 481=27 C.W.N. 629= 28 B.L.R. 548=37 C.L.J. 501= (1923) M.W.N. 392=1923 P.C. 13.

———Circumstantial evidence—Value of.

Where there is a break in the chain of the circumstantial evidence every piece of the evidence making up the charge must be on record or else the appellate Court may find it difficult to see how the particular conclusion has been arrived at, and consequently miscarriage of justice may result. In capital cases it is better that every fact be strictly proved on record, than extracting admissions from counsel. (Knox and Walsh, JJ.) SHEO NARAYAN SINGH v. EMPEROR. 21 Cr. L.J. 777=58 I.C. 457= 2 U.P.L.R. (All.) 128.

———Circumstantial evidence—Value of—Murder Case—Benefit of doubt.

In a murder case where there is no direct evidence but only circumstantial evidence the jury must first decide what portions of the circumstantial evidence have been established and then see whether they constitute sufficient proof and if they have doubts, they must let the prisoner have the benefit of doubt. ———Circumstantial evidence — Conviction —Rules for guidance.

Circumstantial evidence in order to justify a conviction must be exhaustive and must exclude the possibility of guilt of any other person or must point conclusively to the complicity of the accused. But 'exhaustive' does not mean that every incident short of the criminal act must be proved by positive evidence, and the "possibility" must not be treated as signifying "physical possibility" but so high a degree of probability that a prudent man considering all the facts and realising that the life or liberty of the accused person depends upon the decision, feels that the accused committed the crime. (Johnstone, C.J. and Broadway, J.) THAKARDAS v. EMPEROR. 18 Cr. L.J. 875= 38 I.C. 759=32 P.R. (Cr.) 1916.

Pedigree.

———Pedigree—Proof of—Value of.

In social conditions where people have not yet learnt to place exclusive reliance on written and printed records and where family pride, family rights encourage the maintenance of a body of oral family history, memory unaided by permanent materials is often a very sufficient medium of record and oral communication often preserves the record with singular uniformity. A pedigree does not therefore lose its value in proportion to its remoteness from the present time at least so far as names and kinship was concerned. (Lord Sumner). MEWA SINGH v. BASANT SINGH.

———Value of—English and Vernacular—Record of depositions.

In cases where evidence is given by a witness in his own language, the vernacular record is always treated as more reliable and entitled to greater weight but this maxim could not always be safely applied in cases where a Magistrate who is taking down the evidence simultaneously in English understands the language as well as his reader. ———Value of—Finger prints—Duty of Court.

There is nothing in the so-called science of finger prints or the qualification of an expert in it which prevents the Court from applying its own eyes and mind to the evidence and verifying the results submitted to it by experts. If the finger prints are clear enough to sustain an argument there is no reason why an argument by way of deduction should not be as sure foundation for a conclusion and it may be a better one than any based on direct evidence. A party is entitled to have taken into consideration the statements of the opposite party's witnesses in cross-examination. (Lindsay, J.C. and Rafique, J.) MUHAMMAD HUSSAIN v. LALJI SINGH. 25 I.C. 648 = 1 O L.J. 366.

———Value of—Thak maps—Revenue register—Possession.

Thak maps are good evidence of possession at the time they were made, but they are no evidence of title acquired by prescription or adverse possession. The object of the Thackbust survey, which preceded the Revenue Survey, was to ascertain the position of the boundaries and area of estates and villages and it was no part of the duty of the Revenue Officers conducting the Thakbust operations to record the prescriptive rights. (Das and Kulwant Sahay, JJ.) CHATTRAPAT PRATAP BAHADUR SAHI v. G. LEE. 4 P.L T. 487 = 1 P.L.R. 322 = 1923 P. 558.

———Value of—Child witness—Credibility.

The mere fact that the evidence of the only eye-witness of a crime is that of a child of 6 years of age is not a ground for not relying on it, especially when the evidence is given without hesitation and without the slightest suggestion of tutoring and there is corroboration of the evidence and of the child's subsequent conduct immediately afterwards. (Miller, C.J. and Adami, J.) FATU SANTAL v. EMPEROR. 2 P.L T. 288 = 61 I.C. 705 = 22 Cr. L.J. 417 = 6 P.L.J. 147.

In a trial for the murder of a particular person, the prosecution should not show, that on two previous occasions the accused under trial had committed murders but had falsely charged and got convicted some others as murderers. The fact that the previous murders have been committed by the accused does not constitute a motive or preparation under S. 8. The evidence could not be treated as evidence of conduct, apart from the accompanying statement under S. 8 of the Act. The statement made by the Police officer to the complainant in the presence of the accused that he (the accused) was going to show the various places connected with the theft, was not admissible under S. 8, Expln. 2 because the conduct apart from accompanying statement, was not shown to be relevant and under the circumstances such a statement could not be said to affect the conduct of the accused. Whenever evidence is sought to be let in under S. 10, the accused is entitled to insist on strict compliance with its provisions namely proof of reasonable ground for belief that the persons named have conspired together. ——S. 10—Scope of English and Indian Law.

S. 10 of the Evidence Act is wider than the English law. As soon as it is shown with regard to an individual conspirator, that he was in privy with the combination and its objects and adopted the acts already performed, he as a conspirator becomes bound by the antecedent and the consequent acts of his fellow conspirators. There is a considerable inconsistency between S. 10 of the Evidence Act and the illustration thereto. It is not necessary to establish by direct evidence that the accused persons did enter into an agreement to commit an offence to attract the operation of S. 10 of the Evidence Act, against the accused. The finding of closed covers relating the conspiracy in possession of one of the conspirators is relevant against the other under S. 10. (Johnstone and Rattigan, JJ.) A judgment not inter partes in a previous suit is admissible in a subsequent suit to prove the fact that the judgment was passed. It is therefore necessarily evidence of the following further facts; who the parties to the dispute were; what the land in dispute was; and who was declared entitled thereto. To this extent and no more the judgment is admissible against even third parties. 22 C. 523; 29 C. 187, Ref. (Wazir Hasan, A.J.C.) The judgment only proves that at that time also the right of the granthi to alienate certain property was called in question. The finding of the Court that the property was waqf and was attached to the granthi is not relevant in a subsequent suit by the successor to the office challenging the alienation by his predecessor-in-title. In a case where the accused are tried for being members of a gang of dacoits and simple theft or bad livelihood in which the order for giving security is based on evidence merely that the accused habitually commits theft (as opposed to dacoity and possibly robbery) it is not evidence indicating an intention to commit the particular crime of which the accused is charged. It at most merely indicates a disposition to commit crimes of a similar class. It is doubtful whether dacoity may not be put in a higher class than theft. (Fawcett, J.) On a charge against two persons of murder and conspiracy to rob the victim and for abetment of the offences, the prosecution adduced evidence of their association in connection with other charges of theft in the town, that they used to go about together, under different names, the one taking the other as his durwan and introducing himself as a rich landlord to several rich women who subsequently lost ornaments and cash which were gradually recovered. Held that the evidence was improperly admitted. (Per Mookerjee, J.) S. 15, Evidence Act is not applicable as there was no question of the act being accidental or intentional or forming part of a series of similar transactions. S. 14 of the Act did not also apply as the defence was a complete denial and no question of the character contemplated in S. 14 did or could possibly arise. Where the accused who were charged under S. 399, I.P.C., plead that their presence in company and armed at a spot was accidental and innocent, it is open to the prosecution to rebut this theory, and to produce evidence that in the same locality raids have taken place in which one of the gang had been concerned. In the case of actual dacoity the prosecution is bound to prove the accused's commission of all the acts which constitute the offence. S. 15 of the Evidence Act admits the production of any evidence which would determine the construction to be placed upon acts which in themselves might or might not be the preparation for dacoity and evidence that one or more members of the gang had been concerned in previous and similar offences committed at the same place is admissible in evidence for the purpose. ———S. 18—Admissions—Ignorance of legal rights—Effect of.

An admission by the deft. in favour of plff. in ignorance of his legal rights will not be binding upon him if the plff. as a matter of fact has no legal claim. (Collins, C. J. and Parker, J.) ALLAREDDI SUBBAMMA v. NALLAPAREDDI. 11 M.L.T. 124 = (1912) M.W.N. 178 = 13 I.C. 870 = 22 M.L.J. 260.

———S. 18—Admission by predecessor-in-title.

Statements made by persons from whom the parties to a suit have derived their interest are admissible as admissions only when the admissions are of a date prior to the date of their deriving interest. Statements made by persons in possession of property and qualifying or affecting their title thereto are receivable against the party claiming through them by title subsequent to the admission. ——S. 18—Admission must be taken as a whole.

It is a well-established principle of law that if a plaintiff wishes to rest his case solely on the admission of a defendant with regard to a particular transaction he must accept the admission as to that transaction as a whole. It is not open to him to pick out such part of the admission as may be favourable to himself and to neglect the rest. The plaintiffs sued to redeem a mortgage. The defendant admitted the mortgage but pleaded that the mortgage amount was more than that alleged by the plaintiffs. Held that no burden lay on the defendants to prove the amount. —— S 19—Admissions—Mere possession of document.

For a document to amount to an admission it is not necessary that it should have been written by the person against whom it is sought to be used. Mere possession of the document does not, by itself, count for much. It is sufficient if it be proved that the document has been in his possession and that his conduct in reference to it, is such as to create an inference that he was aware of its contents or admitted its accuracy. 106 P.R. 1917 = 41 I C. 163 = 119 P.W.R. 1917.

The statements of a person who is in the best position to know all about his property ought not to be lightly set side on the mere ground that they were made with fraudulent purpose. If his legal representative alleges the statement to be incorrect, the burden of proving that this is so, lies on him. (Reid, C.J. and Robertson, J.) ——Ss 19, 21—Admission—Statement of third person.

An admission by one co-mortgagee of receipt of the whole debt is evidence against the others under S. 19 of the Act ; and the admission of a third person against his own interest, where it affects his position or liability, when that position or liability has to be proved against a party to the suit is relevant against that party. 25 M.L.J. 51, foll. An admission of receipt of sums of money is in most cases an admission against his interest. Admissions in pleadings are relevant under S. 19 or 32 (3) of the Act and in the absence of the other evidence such word should be marked as exhibits in the case and there referred to as evidence in the judgment of the Court. (Per Tyabji, J.) The statements referred to in S. 19 become admissible only if they satisfy S 17 as regards their nature, and S. 21, or the following sections as regards their relevancy. Representatives.

——S 21—Representatives — Father and son—Parent not authorised to make admission—Son not deriving any interest from parent—Admission, whether can be used against son.

The relevancy of an admission must be determined by reference to the terms of the Evidence Act. The father's admission in a previous suit cannot bind a son in a subsequent suit if the latter does not derive his interest in the subject-matter of the subsequent suit from the former. Nor can the father be regarded as having been expressly or impliedly authorised by the son to make the admission. In a suit by reversioners for recovery of property they, in no way, claim through their parents nor could their parents be regarded as authoried to make the admissions. Therefore admissions by parents in former suits are irrelevant and inadmissible. (Lord Moulton) SREEMUTHY MANORARAIN DEBI v. HARIPADA MITTER.

Confession, evidentiary value.

———Ss. 24 and 25—Confession—Evidentiary value—English law—Statement by accused—When admissible.

Under the English Criminal Law, no statement by an accused is admissible in evidence against him unless it is shown by the prosecution to have been a voluntary statement, in the sense that it has not been obtained from him either by fear of prejudice or hope of advantage exercised or held out by a person in authority. The fact that a statement was made by an accused person under circumstances of hope, fear, or otherwise, strictly speaking, goes only to minimise its weight The rule by which, is excluded evidence of statements made by a prisoner, when he has been induced to make them, by hope held out or fear inspired by a person in authority, is a rule of policy. Statements made to police, while in custody are not admissible evidence, though those statements may be incriminating. A statement made by the accused against another, and a confirming statement made by another accused, when questioned by Police before the Headman are excluded by the above sections of the Act; and S. 24 does not admit as legal evidence an incriminating statement to Headman at the latter's suggestion to speak the truth, lest witnesses for the other side may let it out when called. Confession, what is.

——S. 24—Confession—What is—Accused on trial—Evidence of identification.

A confession made voluntarily in the sense that it was made spontaneously and without any inducement is admissible in evidence under S. 24 of the Evidence Act. ——S. 24—Confession, what is—Cr. P. C., Ss. 164 and 339 (2).

Any statement by a person which would suggest an inference as to his guilt may be a confession within S. 24 of the Act. Where a confession recorded under S. 164 of the Cr. P. C., was procured by a Police Officer by the offer of an inducement, it is inadmissible under S. 24 of the Evidence Act. Per Shah, J.—S. 24 will apply even if the person confessing was not accused person at the time of confession. It is sufficient if he ultimately becomes an accused person with reference to the charge in respect of which he is said to have confessed. Though a statement of an approver may be given in evidence against him under S. 339 (2) of the Cr. P.C., it cannot be said that the operation of S. 24 is altogether excluded. If it is shown that some influence was proceeding from some authority, simultaneously with the legal tender of pardon, which would invite the application of S. 24 of the Evidence Act, then the confessional part of the statement would be inadmissable by virtue of the section. Per Heaton, A.C.J.—(Hayward, J. Semble) :—A statement falling within S. 339 (2) of the Code is beyond the operation of S. 24 of the Evidence Act. (Heaton, A.C.J., Shah and Hayward, JJ.) Inducement.

——Ss. 24 and 30—Inducement of pardon—Admissibility against co-accused.

In three cases, each of them involving a large number of alleged dacoities, the accused were tried together for participation in three separate dacoities, committed at different times, and at different places, but round about the same season and round about the same neighbourhood. One of the accused was informed by the Magistrate that if he made a voluntary confession which was found to be full and true, his prayer for being made an approver would receive due consideration and eventually he made an elaborate statement amounting to a confession under S. 164, Cr. P. Code. He was subsequently tried and convicted and his confession was used not only against himself but against the other accused. Held that the confession was inadmissible under S. 24 of the Evidence Act and as it formed the main reason for the conviction of the other accused, their conviction could not stand. A collecting panchayat and an assistant panchayat who have taken part in holding the enquiry into the circumstances under which the offence has been committed constitute "person in authority" within the meaning of S. 24 of the Evidence Act. Where in answer to a question to the accused whether he would be saved from the consequence of his act if he confessed, the assistant panchayat gave him an assurance that he would be let off if he disclosed everything and the confession by the accused was made as a result of such assurance the confession is inadmissible in evidence. The accused in this case made a confession to the assistant panchayat before his arrest, on first January, 1922. The accused was thereupon kept in custody till the next day when the police formally arrested him and sent him before a Magistrate. The Magistrate recorded his confession on the 4th of January. Held, that the improper influence of the assistant panchayat continued up to the time when the confession was made and it was consequently inadmissible in evidence. ———Ss. 24, 25 and 26—Person in authority—Statement leading to direct inference of guilt—Military officer assisting in police investigation—Statements made at police search and before arrest—"Custody."

To constitute a 'confession' under the Evidence Act, it is not necessary that the person confessing should make a full and explicit admission of his guilt so clean as to leave no other hypothesis tenable. It is enough if they lead to an inference of guilt. The words "accused person" in Ss. 24 to 26 include any person who subsequently becomes accused. provided that at the time of making the statement, criminal proceedings were in prospect. The expression "person in authority" has a wider meaning than the actual prosecutor and the test is, has the person any authority to interfere in the matter and any concern or interest in it, sufficient to give him authority, 8 B.H.C.R. 358; 8 Bom, L.R 507; 26 I.C. 161, Ref. A confession made to a Thugee by an accused who had been sent for by the former after being told that he would not be punished if he was not a party to the offence is irrelevant and inadmissible in evidence as the Thugee is a person in authority within the meaning of S. 24 of the Act and what the Thugee told him was an inducement to make a statement. Other answers and questions based on the inadmissible statement are also inadmissible. (Fox, C.J. and Parlett, J.) NGA KYA THIN v. EMPEROR. 15 Cr. L J. 681 = 8 Bur. ———S. 24—Person in authority—Zamindars.

A confession to certain Zamindars sent for that purpose by the police who held out an inducement to the accused, that they would save him, is inadmissible under S. 24, because they were investigating the offence just like policemen and must be considered to be persons in authority who procured the confession by their inducement and promise. ———S. 24—Retracted confession—Confession—Value of, as evidence.

It cannot be laid down as an inflexible rule that a confession made by a prisoner cannot be accepted as evidence of his guilt without independent corroboration evidence. The weight to be given to such a confession must depend on the circumstances under which the confession was originally given and the circumstances under which it was retracted including the reasons given by the prisoner for its retraction. It is unsafe for a Court to rely on and act on a confession which has been retracted unless after a consideration of the whole of the evidence in the case, the Court is in a position to come to the unhesitating conclusion that the confession is true, that is to say, usually unless the confession is corroborated by credible independent evidence. A retracted confession should carry practically no weight as against a person other than its maker. (Newbould and Pearson, JJ.) EMPEROR v. BISESWAR DEY.

A confessing prisoner should not be convicted upon a retracted confession unless it is corroborated in material particulars. Where it is a question of using a confession against a co-accused and the Court is not prepared to accept the confession per se as sufficient, the corroboration ought to be of the kind that not only confirms the general story of the crime but also unmistakably connects the co-accused with the crime. When a retracted confession is the sole evidence against an accused, it can be of but little value especially remembering the competition for a pardon which sometimes occurs where a number of persons are suspected of an offence and some have already confessed or are believed to have confessed. It is not illegal to convict on the uncorroborated confession of the accused provided the Court is satisfied that it was voluntary and free, and it is immaterial from the point of view of pure legality that the confession has been retracted. It is however not safe in general to convict on an uncorroborated confession from the point of view of common experience and prudence, and when it is a question of a confession against a co-accused, the corroboration must not only confirm the general story of the crime but must clearly connect the co-accused with it. Accused was convicted on the evidence of two excise Sub-Inspectors who stated that he offered them Rs. 10 per ball of opium as a bribe to let him land from a steamer unmolested. Held that the alleged offer by the accused amounted to an admission that he had a large quantity of contraband opium in his possession and being an admission of an offence under the Opium Act, was therefore a confession and was thus inadmissible under S. 25 of the Evidence Act. The test, which has to be applied in deciding whether S. 25, Evidence Act, applies, is the position of the person at the time when it is proposed to prove the admission and not his position at the time when he is alleged to have made it. A confession therefore made to a police officer by a person when he is not accused of any offence is inadmissible in evidence against him when he is accused of an offence. Any incriminating statement made in writing by accused while in police custody whether amounting to confession or not, is not admissible either against him or against a person jointly tried with him, unless such statement has led to the discovery of any fact mentioned in S. 27 of the Evidence Act. Any deposition recorded by a Magistrate on solemn affirmation can be admitted only against the deponent and not against a co-accused and record of the statement made by Magistrate in a case he subsequently commits to the Sessions, must be in the form laid down in S. 464, Cr. P. Code and any defect in it can be cured by actual evidence of the Magistrate. A confession of an accused is not admissible against co-accused under S. 30 of Evidence Act if the former is convicted on his plea of guilty. 5 C. 954; 5 A. 253, Ref. ——Ss. 27 and 26, 25 and 24—Discovery in pursuance of confession— Police officer—Admissibility of statement.

When a confession as a whole is excluded whether by reason of S. 26 or 25 or 24, so much of the information, given by the person making the confession when the accused was in custody, as distinctly relates to a relevant act thereby discovered, becomes admissible. When the accused himself produced the articles said to be discovered, so much of the information as set the police in motion and led to the discovery is admissible. Per Huda, J.—Under S. 27 only so much of the information, whether amounting to a confession or not, as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered may be proved. Even if a single statement contains more information than what is contemplated in S. 24, the statement is not to go in as a whole nor is it to go in as a statement at all, but what is admissible is the particular information given by the statement which led to the discovery. S. 27 of the Evidence Act, qualifies not only Ss. 25 and 26 but also S. 24, all three of which lay down general rules excluding confessions and the same broad grounds underlies all the three. ——— S. 27 — Incriminating statement — Production of articles—Police custody.

Where there is practically no evidence at all against an accused except an incriminating statement under S. 27, the latter should be viewed with great caution and suspicion. The statement of an accused that he buried the weapon in a certain place is relevant but not the part of the statement that it was the weapon with which he had committed the crime. If the accused produced the article himself, the fact that he produced it at a particular place may be proved, but the accompanying statement that he buried it there is inadmissible. The statement of the accused that he could point out a spot and that blood-stains would be found there is admissible but not that it was at that spot that he committed the crime. ——— Ss. 27, 30 and 114—Information by accused—Retracted confession—Corroboration.

To bring an information by accused under S. 27, the information must have had the direct effect of leading to the discovery of the stolen property. Per Lyle, A.J.C.—Although criminals do at times confess for no apparent reason, they generally do so in some vague hope of escaping from the penalty of their crime when they know or believe there is evidence. Per Ashworth, A.J.C.—When an accused person has pointed out the whereabouts of the body of a man who has undoubtedly been murdered and has made a confession which not only is uncontradicted by any of the facts proved in the case but indeed receives corroboration in respect of many points then the confession should be held to be true as implicating the person making it, unless he can make out a story to the contrary. It is not necessary that the confession of an accused should receive direct corroboration as to the ——S. 30—Confession—Admissibility—Co-accused.

It is not the law that unless a confessing prisoner implicates himself as fully as his co-accused, the statement will not be admissible, the principle being there is no guarantee that the maker of the confession is speaking the truth. All that is required is that the confession shall substantially implicate its maker in regard to the crime with which he and his co-accused are charged. It is not necessary that there should be an admission of actual guilt. The admission may establish constructive guilt. S. 30 of the Evidence Act applies to confessions made to the residents of the same village as the accused. Mullick and Becknil, JJ.) SUKA RAUT v. EMPEROR. 75 I.C. 705 = 4 P.L.T. 505.

Where a co-accused made a statement in gaol to the S.D.O. that he was being tortured to make confession and subsequently made confession implicating himself and the other accused and pardon under S. 357 was tendered and the case against him withdrawn under S. 495, Cr. P. Code Held, he is not a co-accused though examined as a prosecution witness. (Jwala Prasad, J.) SHEOBHAJARIN v. KING-EMPEROR. 2 P.L.T. 125.

Confession—Corroboration.

———S. 30—Confession — Corroboration—Necessity.

Per Scott, C.J. and Heaton, J.—The rule is that a man is not to be convicted solely on the confessions of co-accused and it follows that he must not be convicted on such confessions together with evidence of the ordinary kind which is trivial or unimportant. Where however there is, apart from the confessions, a body of evidence and circumstances enough to support a conviction, if the evidence is accepted as free from untruth or exaggeration or serious mistake or distortion, the Court can take the confessions into consideration and consider together the evidence, the circumstances and the confessions. The material should not be divided into parts. Where the confession of a co-accused is corroborated, it matters not whether on proving the case at the trial, the confession precedes the other evidence or vice versa. There is no rule as to what would constitute sufficient independent corroboration in a particular case. The evidence which is supposed to afford independent corroboration must be in itself reliable ; otherwise it will not be independent corroboration. The value of the confessions of an accused, against a co-accused when those confessions are retracted at the trial, is very low. (Scott, C.J., Heaton and Shah, JJ.) EMPEROR v. SABIT KHAN.

Confession—Evidentiary value.

———S. 30—Confession—Evidentiary value—Probative value of a co-accused's evidence.

The true effect of S. 30 is that the Court can only treat a confession as lending assurance to other evidence against a co-accused. A conviction on the confession of a co-accused alone would be bad in law. A retracted confession should not be relied upon. (Jenkins, C.J., Brett and Chatterjee, JJ.) The confession referred to in S. 30 cannot be restricted to an unretracted confession and there is nothing to prevent a Court from convicting after considering the confession but the rules of practice of the High Courts in India are to be observed when exercising the discretion. A conviction founded solely on the confessions of co-accused cannot be sustained. S. 114 of the Evidence Act applies to the testimony of an accomplice on oath but not to a confession and a Judge sitting with assessors ought never to convict solely on confession but where sitting with jury he could either ask the accused to withdraw the confession or direct them to acquit unless corroborated in material particulars by independent evidence. The accused were charged under S. 330, I.P. C., with having for the purpose of extorting a confession, caused hurt to one R , who committed suicide owing to the ill-treatment. Held, that ill-treatment was the cause though not the direct cause of the suicide and although the accused were not legally responsible for the suicide, the whole affair, ill-treatment, and subsequent suicide, being one transaction the statement of the deceased was admissible under S. 32 (1) of the Evidence Act. ———S. 32 (1)—Dying declaration—Proof of.

A dying declaration recorded by a Magistrate is not evidence unless proved by the statement of the Magistrate though he is himself the committing Magistrate in the case. EVIDENCE ACT (I of 1872), S. 32—Dying declaration.

A dying declaration recorded by a Magistrate should be proved before it can be accepted as evidence and the fact that the Magistrate was the Committing Magistrate in the case is not unreasonable in itself but is legally insufficient, makes no difference. Dying declarations are not covered by Ch. 41 of the Cr. P.C. to enable them to be admitted without proof. (Reid, C.J. and Kensington, J.) GHAZI v. EMPEROR.

———S. 32 (1)— Dying declaration—Admisibility of.

Evidence Act makes dying declarations relevant facts as written statements of deceased or written records of verbal statements which a deceased makes and which becomes substantive evidence of the cause of deceased's death. An oral statement of the deceased about the cause of his death may be proved by any who heard it as well as by the person who recorded it. Under S. 321 it is not necessary that the magistrate recording the confession should be called and be asked to refresh his memory by referring to statements of witness under S. 159 of Evidence Act. 8 C. 211; 6 C.W.N. 72 dessented from. ———Ss. 32, 33 —Dying declaration—When admissible.

The dying declaration being the most important piece of evidence must be as exact and full as possible. Where the record of the said declaration spoken to by the witnesses is apparently less than what they said, a retrial must be held The propr legal mode of proving verbal statements of a deceased is to elicit it from the person who heard him make it. The witness can refresh his memory from the record of the statements returned by himself or by another in his presence; otherwise it is not relevant. If it is a deposition in the presence of the accused it would be relevant. A deceased's written statement signed by him after having been satisfied of its accuracy is admissible under S. 32 as his statement in writing. Such a statement would not debar a witness from proving that the deceased said, independently of the writing. It would be desirable to record, what the witness can reproduce from his memory without reference to the writing. (Abdur Rahim and Sadasiva Aiyar, JJ). PUBLIC PROSECUTOR v. BALA NAGI REDDI.

The relationship between a Mohant and a Chela is a relationship by adoption and a statement by a mohant that he has one chela is a statement relating to the existence of a relationship. A statement as to the time of commencement of relationship is so indissolubly associated with the existence itself of the relationship that it may be rightly regarded as a statement relating to the existence of that relationship under cl. 5, S. 32 of the Evidence Act. 25 M. 189; 24 I.C. 519 Ref. The deposition of witnesses (since deceased) made at an enquiry held by a Sub-Registrar under S. 41, cl. (2) of the Registration Act regarding the genuineness of a will are admissible in evidence in a subsequent suit between the same parties raising a question as to the genuineness of the will, provided the witnesses are dead and the parties had an opportunity of cross-examining them at the enquiry before the Sub-Registrar. A defendant was newly added during the course of a trial by direction of Court. He raised no objection to the evidence taken at a previous stage of the proceedings going on record nor desired that it should be reheard; his interests however were fully represented by another defendant and he was fully cognisant of the steps taken by the former to prove their common case. On appeal by both of them jointly against the judgment of the trial Court and the objection as to the admissibility of the evidence against the new defendant, held, that the objection should be disallowed and that S. 33 of the Evidence Act did not apply. ——Ss. 33 and 58—Duty of Court while admitting statement of absent witness—Statement of public prosecutor—Consent of accused.

Under S. 33 of the Act it is the duty of the Court to satisfy itself that the presence of the witness cannot be obtained without an amount of delay or expense which it considers unreasonable before the statement of the witness in a previous judicial proceeding can be admitted. The mere statement of the public prosecutor to the effect is not sufficient. ——S. 33—Conditions before admitting evidence.

Per May-Oung, J.—The power given by S. 33, Evidence Act, requires to be exercised with great care and the Court must insist on strict proof before holding that the requisite conditions have been satisfied. The Court must also in the judgment or preferably in a separate order, record the reasons for doing so Per Lentaigne, J.—It is a far preferable and safer precaution that the Court should record its reasons for holding that the necessary conditions of S. 33 have been complied with, before such deposition is admitted into evidence. The section pre-supposes a consideration of the grounds prior to the admission of the evidence and if the reasons too are recorded prior to the admission, the order would constitute a more convincing proof of the considered adequacy of the grounds than a passage in the judgment subsequently written which may easily assume the appearance of a subsequent statement of excuses for a previous ill-considered action. ———Ss. 34, 9 and 11—Absence of—Entry in account book—Relevancy of.

The absence of an entry in a book of accounts is a relevant fact under Ss. 9 and 11 of the Act, and not under S. 34 to prove the alleged payment, but the weight to be given to such absence depends upon the circumstances of each case. (Mookerjee and Beachcroft, JJ.) GANGARAM AGARWALA v. LACHURAM KISANDAYAL. 28 I.C. 705 = 19 C.W.N. 611.

———S. 34—Entries in books of account—Value of—How to be proved.

———S. 34—Mere production, not sufficient

———S. 34—Entry in book of account—Evidence necessary of proof—Nature of.

As far as possible it is necessary that independent and trustworthy evidence should be let in, in support of entries in books of accounts. A mere statement of the plaintiff is not sufficient for the purpose. (Rattigan and Beadon, JJ.) GANGARAM v. KAKARAM. 47 P.L.R. 1914 = 22 I.C. 403 = 53 P.W.R. 1914.

———S. 34—Entries in books of account—Corroboration.

S. 34 of the Evidence Act only lays down that a plff. cannot obtain a decree by merely proving the existence of certain entries in his book of accounts even though these books are shown to be kept in the regular course of business. He will have to show further by some independent evidence that the entries represent real and honest transactions and that the moneys were paid in accordance with those entries. No particular forms or kind of evidence in addition to the entries is required. Any relevant facts which can be treated as evidence within the meaning of the Evidence Act would be sufficient corroboration of the evidence furnished in the books of accounts, if true. (Abdur Rahim and Oldfield, JJ.) M. S. YESUVADIYAN v. SUBBA NAICKER. 52 I.C. 705.

———S. 34—Account book entry in value of—Presumption—Proof.

It is not the necessary or ordinary effect of a credit entry in an account book in favour of a person that the sum so entered thereby is transferred to him; all that it implies is that he is entitled to the amount from the person in whose account the entry occurs. How the former became so entitled has to be proved aliunde, the ordinary presumption being that such amount had been paid in by the person to whom it is credited. (Abdur Rahim, O.C.J. and Seshagiri Aiyar, J.) SABJAN SAHIB v. ABDUL AZEEZ SAHIB. 42 I.C. 684.

——S. 34—Entries in account books—Admissibility—Objection to.

Objection to admissibility on the ground that entries were not proved to have been kept in the regular course of business, ought to be taken at the time of the trial where entries in certain books of account are proved to be in the handwriting of a deceased person. ——S. 34—Books of account—Admissibility—Conditions of.

An entry to be admissible under S. 34 of the Evidence Act must be in a book of account regularly kept in the course of business which if not admitted must be formally proved. A collection of sheets of paper bound together with the intention that it should be permanent is a " book " but a book containing entries of items of which no account is made at any time is not a book of account. For purposes of admissibility Cash Books, Ledgers, and Day Books are equal though they may differ in the weight to be given to each. (Stanyon, A. J. C.) ——S. 34—Account books not written from day to day—Admissibility.

——S. 35—Pergannh register—Konungo Register—Thak Map and statement—Admissibility of.

The Perganah and Konungo Registers are not punctually kept and are not admissible in evidence to prove an omission of an entry therein as to lekheraj. The konungo account and the General and Mauzawar Registers being intended to facilitate the collection of the Government dues, there was no authority to enter therein lekheraj not the subject-matter of resumption proceedings. The Thak officers not being empowered to measure and record lekherajas of less than 50 bighas in area, the omission of lekherajas in the Thak statement is not of any probative value. ——Ss. 35 and 13—Chittas—Assessment proceedings—When admissible.

Proceedings taken for assessment of rent upon rent free lands, the petition originating the proceedings, reports of the Collector and orders of the Board of Revenue, altogether furnish a valuable evidence as to the recognition by the Govt. of the right of the plff.'s predecessors in title to hold the land rent-free. Chittas prepared by Govt. for explaining and as part of proceedings taken for assessment of rent upon lands said to be improperly held rent-free are admiseible in evidence when coupled with resumption proceedings. An entry in a public register kept for the public benefit under the sanction of official duty is relevant under S. 35 whether the clerk making the entry had personal knowledge or not or whether the register was a copy of a previous register which had become untidy. ———Ss. 47, 73—Expert evidence—Value of—What must be proved.

In a case of forgery the only chief evidence being an expert's examination of the forged document as compared with the other documents alleged to be in the handwriting of the accused, the other documents must be strictly proved to be in his handwriting. A mere statement therefore by a witness that it is the handwriting of the accused is no evidence if he is not able to say how long ago they were written. In arriving at a conclusion of the authorship of the forged document the expert should show marked peculiarities in this handwriting of the accused which are reproduced in the forged document and when the writing has no such peculiarities, the comparison is of no consequence and cannot be relied on. Also the fact that the disputed samples are put separately from the standard ones for the examination lessens its usefulness. A conviction cannot be based on an expert's comparison, if it is not supported by corroborative evidence. (Sundara Aiyar and Spencer, JJ.) In re BEAS SUB VENKATA ROW. 36 Mad 159=

Although it is true that under the Evidence Act comparison of handwriting is legitimate enough and the view of persons competent to express opinions mey be in many cases of considerable value, the opinions of those who have not carefully studied the art of caligraphy is not as a rule of very great utility. Indeed so uncertain and inexact is the science of the study of caligraphy that it has been for some years past the tendency to regard evidence even of experts as of some what inconclusive character. The mere fact that there is a resemblance between the signature alleged to be false and a signature admitted to be genuine does not carry great weight. ——Ss. 58 and 70—Admission of execution—Proof of attestation.

Under S. 70 of the Evidence Act, the admission of execution of a mortgage document is sufficient proof as against the executant himself, but there is no authority for the proposition that the document is for that reason binding upon the other defendants who were not parties to it. As against the latter the document must be proved according to law unless S. 58 of the Evidence Act applies to the case and relieves the plaintiffs from the burden of proving attestation in respect of any of the defendants who have admitted the fact of the attestation. ——Ss. 63, 32 (2), 35, 65 and 91—Lost grant—Secondary evidence.

As Ss. 65 and 91 make it clear that when a written grant is lost secondary evidence can be given of it only as defined by law, a translation of parwana or grant forming the enclosure to the report of a public officer is not admissible as secondary evidence of the contents of the grant under any of the Ss. 63, 32 (2) or 35. (Sadasiva Iyer and Moore, JJ.) AMBALAVANA PANDARASANNADHI v. KUPPACHI AMMAL. 38 I.C. 201 = 4 L W. 331.

——Ss. 63 and 65—Secondary evidence—Public document—Copy not available.

Where a certified copy of a lost public document is not available other secondary evidence of its contents is admissible. 5 Cal. 58; 6 M. 80, Foll. A register of orders issued by the Collector in charge of a Zemindari kept in the ordinary course of business may be taken to be an accurate copy of the orders issued and may be admitted as secondary evidence of such orders (Wallis, C. ——S. 63, 65 and 66—Secondary evidence—Admissions—Destruction of or absence of original—Suit upon mortgage document—Forgery—Decree on—Admission.

Where a party sues to redeem a mortgage putting forward a certain document as embodying the transaction and that document is found to be a forgery, a decree cannot be given to him on the basis of the written admissions of the deft as to the contents of the mortgage. No question of secondary evidence arises, without proof of the existence and due execution of the original. Per Spencer and Tyabji, JJ.)—S. 63 of the Evidence Act does not exhaust the kinds of secondary evidence that may be adduced. Per Tyabji, J.—Having regard to Ss. 65 and 66 of the Evidence Act written admissions of the contents of documents are inadmissible without proof of the original having been destroyed or being otherwise not available for production. (Per Sadasiva Iyer, J.) When the plff. puts forward a forged document as primary evidence, it cannot

——S 65 (a) and (f)—Non-production of document—Mortgage-deed—Secondary evidence—Registration Act, S. 57 (5).

Plff. failed to obtain the original mortgage-deed in possession of the deft. and therefore produced a certified copy. One of the three witnesses was dead and the remaining two on seeing the copy, could not remember whether they had attested the deed. One of the two witnesses said that the executants mentioned in the copy executed a mortgage at or about the time mentioned in the copy. Plff. examined another person who proved a note in the papers of plff. about payment of interest due on the deed. Held, that the copy was admissible in evidence under S. 65 (a) and (f) of the Evidence Act read with S. 57 (5) of the Registration Act. Admission of Execution.

——Ss. 68 and 70—Admission of execution—Denial of proper attestation—Procedure.

Where a mortgagor admits having signed the mortgage sought to be enforced but couples it with a denial of the presence of the attestors at the time of signing the mortgagee must prove the execution of the mortgage by calling at least one attesting witness to prove the attestation. The admission, qualified as it was, did not entitle the mortgagee to the benefit of S. 70 of the Evidence Act. No admission of execution is effectual under S. 70 of the Evidence Act unless it amounts to an acknowledgment of the formal validity of the instrument. The execution of a document means something more than the mere signing by the party. It includes delivery and signing in the presence of witnesses where witnesses are necessary. Where the admission of execution is unqualified it may well be an admission of due execution or a waiver of proof of due execution within the

Where an attestor denies having witnessed the execution of a document, it is open to the parties to let in other oral evidence to show that the attestor did as a matter of fact see the execution and was an attesting witness. ——Ss. 68 and 70—Attestation, proof of—Admission by executant—Proof as against third parties.

Admission of execution of an attested document by the executant or by a person representing his interest is sufficient proof of its execution against the person making such admission. As against the other parties the document must be proved in accordance with S. 68 of the Evidence Act. (N. R. Chatterjee and Richardson, JJ.) NIBARAN CHANDRA SEN v. NAGENDRA CHENDRA SEN.

To prove due execution of a mortgage it is sufficient if one of the attesting witnesses proves its execution as also attestation by himself and some of the other attesting witnesses who are dead. Under S. 68 of the Evidence Act it is not necessary to call two attesting witnesses to prove execution. (Mookerjee and Beachcroft, JJ.) TULSI MAHATO v. CHETHREE LAL ROY.

The production of one attesting witness satisfies the requirements of S. 68 of the Evidence Act, and from a mere failure to do more than is required of the mortgagee and to produce both the witnesses even if he knows where the other is, it cannot be inferred that the mortgagee is intentionally keeping back the other and that therefore his evidence would damage the plaintiff's case. Mere proof or admission of the genuineness of the signature of the executant of a document does not dispense with the proof of its proper attestation if the document is one required by law to be attested. The facts that a document is more than thirty years old and is registered and the genuineness of the signature of its executant on it, is admitted, may go to raise a presumption as to the genuineness. But such a presumption does not exclude the right of the person against whom the document is set up to rebut that presumption by showing that it was not properly attested and was, therefore, inoperative. S. 59 of the T. P. Act dealing with the validity of a document cannot be interpreted to provide the mode of proof of execution in derogation of the requirements of the Evidence Act. An appellate Court must call for clearer proof of attestation of a document if required as per discretion left to it under S. 58 proviso of Evidence Act and R. 5 of O. 8, of the C.P. against him, though it be document required by law to be attested. Per Crump, J.—The word "execution" in S. 70 of the Evidence Act means that the party by affixing his signature or mark has signified his assent to the contents of the document, and if a party admits that he has done this, he admits execution. The admission of execution cannot be taken to mean admission not only of the signature or mark in token of assent by him, but also that all the legal formalities connected with the document have been complied with. There is no reason for holding that where a party admits execution within the meaning of S. 70 he must necessarily be taken to admit that the document has been attested as required by S. 59 of the T.P. Act. (Shah, A.C.J. and Crump, J.) JAGANATH NARSINGDAS v. RAVJI TULSIRAM. 24 Bom. L.R. 1296=47 B. 187= 1293 Bom. 90.

——S. 70—Admission of mortgage—Proof of attestation—Legal representatives.

Section 70 provides that the admission of a party to an attested document, of its execution, by himself, shall be sufficient proof of its execution as against him, though it be a document required by law to be attested. The section speaks of an admission by a party to an attested document of its execution by himself; that is, of its execution by the party concerned. An admission by the representative of a party to an attested document of its execution by the party cannot be treated as an admission of the party to an attested document of its execution by himself. Where a person admitted execution of the mortgage but specifically denied that the bond had been duly attested as required by law, in such circumstances it is incumbent upon the party who relies upon the mortgage instrument, to establish that the document was attested as required by law. ——S. 70—Admission of execution—Effect.

Per Woodroffe and Chatterjee, JJ.—Per Newbould, J., contra.—S. 70 must be read as a proviso to S. 68. S. 68 must be read subject to the provision of the subsequent sections; where an executant admits execution of an attested document, the document is admissible as against persons other than the executant without proof by an attestor but such admission will not prove the document as against other persons. ——S. 70—Admission of execution—Effect against co-executants—Attestation.

Where there are two executants in a mortgage-deed, attestation may be according to law in respect of one of them but not in respect of the other. Where execution is admitted and due attestation not denied the question of attestation does not arise, if it does arise, the ——S. 70—"Admission of execution", meaning of.

Admission in S. 70 of the Act related only to the admissions of the parties in the course of the trial of a suit. An admission of execution before a registering officer at the time of registration does not come within the purview of the section. 27 C. 190, Foll.; 1 C.W.N. ccxxii, not Foll. (Drake Brockman, J. ——S. 70—Admission of execution, what is.

The admission referred to in S. 70 only refers to admissions made in the course of the trial. Any admission which can be availed of under S. 70 is only against the party himself. If a party has to prove a document he must prove its execution in all cases, i.e., that it was signed by the executant irrespective of the question as to whether it requires to be attested or not. (Lindsay, J.C.) HARI LAL v. THAKUR BHAGWAN BAKHSH. 34 I.C. 281=19 O.C. 23.

——S. 70—Document required by law to be attested—Admission of execution—Proof of attestation.

Admission by a party of execution of a document is sufficient proof, even though law requires it to be attested. If the admission of the executant has not the effect of dispensing with proof of attestation, S. 70 would be superfluous as recourse may be had to the general provisions of the Act relating to admissions, if the admission of execution is to be used only in the sense of an admission of signing only. The executant's admission may be made prior to the institution of legal proceedings. (Duckworth, J.) AUNG RHI v. MA AUNG KRWA PRU. 1 Rang. 357= 1924 Rang. 189.

The word 'purports' in S. 73 of the Evidence Act means alleged. It is not necessary that the writing which is in dispute must itself in terms express or indicate that it was written by the person to whom it is attributed. When an anonymous writing is produced and ascribed by the prosecution to a particular person then the case for the prosecution is, that having regard to the admitted documents and the comparison between them and the disputed writing, the prosecution alleges that the disputed document purports to have been written or made by the accused. An anonymous writing ascribed to a particular person may therefore be compared under S. 73 of the Evidence Act. 37 C. 467, Diss. (Chandavarkar and Batchelor, JJ.) EMPEROR v. GANPAT BALKRISHNA.

1923 Nag. 169.

——S. 90—Ancient wills—Registration of will—Presumption of genuineness.

The will in dispute having been duly registered and the document being over thirty years old, it must, under S 90 of the Evidence Act, be presumed that it was genuine document, and the fact that it was registered, raised the presumption that the testator was of sound mind at the time of the execution of the will. (Kanhaiya Lal, J.C., and Daniels, A. J. C.) BABU BADRI PRASAD SINGH v. ANNAPURNA KUAR. 52 I C. 837=6 O.L.J. 311.

Appellate Court's Interference.

——S. 90—Appellate Court's interference—Appellate Court's conclusion—Second appeal.

A finding of fact that a deed is admissible, arrived at by the Appellate Court without sufficient grounds being shown, is subject to second appeal, if it has prejudiced the trial of the appeal. (Piggott and Kanhaiya Lal, JJ.) LOKMAN DAS v. GANGA SAHAI. 60 I.C. 95.

——S 90—Appellate Court's interference—Ancient document—Custody—Interference in appeal with discretion of lower Court.

The question of custody of a document under S, 90 of the Evidence Act is one to be decided upon circumstances of each case and the Appellate Court will be slow to interfere with the discretion of the lower Court in the matter, (Woodroffe and Mullick, JJ.) DINAMANI CHAUDHURANI v. JAGAT CHANDRA BHATTACHARJEE. 23 I.C. 775.

The presumption under S. 90 is one in which the Court has to exercise its discretion with the due care and once it has been exercised, an appellate Court will be very slow to interfere. (Chevis, J.) MUHAMMAD USMAN v RAHIM BAKHSH. 44 I C. 559=67 P.W.R. 1918.

Though in the first Court the presumption under S. 90 of the Evidence Act regarding the genuineness of a document is drawn and the document is filed, an Appellate Court is not bound to draw such a presumption. ——S 90—Certified copy of ancient document—Copy of a document—Presumption.

A certified copy of receipt more than thirty years old, is inadmissible in evidence in the absence of any indication of the record from which it was obtained. No presumption can be made in favour of a copy of a document under S. 90 of the Evidence Act. (Drake Brockman, J.C.) NATHURAM v. JAGANNATH.
55 I.C. 426=16 N.L.R. 105.

Computation of thirty years.

——S 90—Computation of thirty years—Presumption.

There is no presumption as to the genuineness of a document not thirty years old when produced, but thirty years old when the evidence was gone into. (Banerjee, J.) CHIRAUNJI LAL v. KALLO. 28 I C. 512=12 A.L.J. 507.

——S. 90—Computation of thirty years.

The period of 30 years mentioned in S. 90, Evidence Act, is to be reckoned from the date when its genuineness is put in controversy and not from the date when it was exhibited in Court. (Martineau and Zafar Ali, JJ.) LADHA SINGH v. MT. HUKAM DEVI
75 I C. 57=4 Lah. 232.

——S. 90—Computation of thirty years.

The period of thirty years under S. 90 must be reckoned as from the date on which the genuineness or otherwise of the document becomes the subject of proof and not from the date of suit. (Broadway J.) HARI RAM v. MUTSADDI. 42 I.C. 80=156 P W.R. 1917.

——S. 90—Computation of thirty years—Time of hearing.

Under S. 90 of the Evidence Act the Court can presume the genuineness of a document thirty years old not on the date of the suit or on the date of its production but on the date when arguments were heard. (Stuart, J C.) MAHADEO PRASAD v. MUSAMMAT NASIBAN.

EVIDENCE ACT (I of 1872), S. 90—Discretion.

——S. 90—Copies of ancient documents not produced before Court.

No presumption can be made under S. 90, Evidence Act, in favour of any document which is itself produced before the Court invited to make the presumption. The production of a copy is insufficient. 5 Cal. 886; 22 All. 294; 93 P.R. 1910; 21 M L.J. 981, Diss. Discretion.

——S. 90—Discretion—Presumption—Genuineness—Practice.

In practice a Court does not ordinarily decide whether it will make the presumption under S. 90 of the Evidence Act or not, until all the evidence in the case is before it. The mere fact that the Court allows evidence to be given about the proof of a deed, does not debar it from making the presumption under S. 90. (Chamier, J.) IBRAHIM v. RAM NARAIN. 16 I.C. 483=10 A.L.J. 87.

Before a Court can presume a document to be genuine under S. 90 of the Act it should be satisfied aliunde that there is a good ground for accepting it as a true document. (Rattigan and Scott-Smith, JJ.) JESA LAL v. GANGA DEVI. 81 P.R. 1913=321 P.L.R. 1913=20 I C. 863=211 P.W.R. 1913.

——S. 90—Discretion—Documents thirty years old—Admissibility—Care and caution.

Considerable care and caution should be exercised in accepting documents, more than 30 years old. Acceptance of genuineness of the document by the parties many years ago is a matter in its favour. EVIDENCE ACT (I of 1872), S. 90—Nature of Presumption under.

Although in the case of sale deeds more than 50 years old the presumption of law was that they were executed by the persons who purported to execute them, there was no presumption that the scribe who signed these documents for the executants had authority from the executants to do it. 15 A.L.J 121 and 60 I.C. 90 Foll. ———S. 90—Nature of presumption under—Kabja receipt—40 years old.

From Kabja receipts, the Court is entitled to presume that the person named therein as purchaser had obtained possession through the Court. Compromise.

——S. 92, proviso (2)—Compromise decree—Part of agreement not entered in compromise deed.

Where a part of the agreement between the parties is not entered in the compromise deed, the case is not covered by S. 92, proviso 2 of the Evidence Act and the parties could not adduce oral evidence of the same. (Richards, C.J. and Banerji, J.) ABDUL HAMID v. ABDUL MAJID. 21 I.C. 308=11 A.L.J. 770.

Where the agreement of compromise by which the plaintiff withdrew a criminal case did not refer to an agreement which the plaintiff was putting forward. Held, that plaintiff was adding a new term to the agreement which settled the terms of the compromise which he could not do under S. 92. ——S. 92—Compromise—Additional evidence if legally admissible.

An order of Court adjourning a case and incidentally making a note as to the fact of an agreemant made out of Court between the parties as a ground of adjournment is not a record of the terms of the compromise; and additional evidence to add to the terms of the compromise is admissible. S. 92 does not bar oral evidence in such a case. (White, C.J. and Sankaran Nair, J.) SAMBANDA MUDALIAR v. CHINNASAWMI SAH. 29 I.C. 860.

Where a litigation is compromised by the parties by means of a written agreement 'of all matters in dispute' it is not open to the parties to tender oral evidence of separate agreement as not having been included in the compromise though concerning a matter dealt with by it. ——S. 92 — Compromise — Evidence of adjustment.

S. 92 of the Evidence Act does not bar the oral evidence to prove an agreement by way of adjustment of a decree as the R. 2 of O. 21, C.P. Code, contemplates the taking of evedence to prove the adjustment. (Mitra, O.J.C. and Hallifax, A.J.C.) RANGLAL v. CHUNNILAL.

The fact that the liabilities under the decree form the consideration for a compromise, did not prevent that compromise from being a new and independent contract which might form the basis of a suit which might be proved by oral evidence and such evidence would not amount to 'contradicting, varying, adding to or subtraction from' the terms of the decree. Implied Contract.

——S. 92, proviso (5)—Implied contract—Compound interest—Bankers—Overdraft.

Under a written contract between a banker and a customer, the latter was to be allowed to overdraw his current account and interest was to be charged at a certain rate per annum, and to be calculated on the daily balance due on the overdraft. The course of business adopted by the bank was that at the end of each month interest was added to the balance then due, and the total carried to the debit of the account. The effect of it was that compound interest with monthly rests was charged and such charge appeared on the face of the customer's pass books. The customer was aware of this mode of computation of interest for several years but he raised no objection thereto. Held, the customer had impliedly agreed to pay compound interest with monthly rests, and that S. 92 of the Evidence Act was no bar to the proof of such agreement by the banker. receipts were parties therein. Further, the recitals in the receipts as to the period for which the payments were made and accepted do clearly evidence one of the terms of the contract. Contracts of leases are in their very nature founded upon executory consideration inasmuch as the payment of rent on the part of the lessee is to be made in future at the stipulated points of time to the lessor. Therefore the recital in the receipts that the payments were made in discharge of the liability under the executory contract is recital of an essential term of the contract. (Wazir Hasan, A.J.C.) Third parties.

——S. 92 — Third parties — Conveyance absolute—Oral evidence to prove a transfer of mortgage was intended—Fraud.

As between the parties to an absolute conveyance, S. 92 of the Evidence Act precludes the giving of oral evidence to prove that the transaction was intended to be a mortgage only. The English equity doctrine permitting evidence of acts and conduct of the parties to be given in evidence for the purpose of ascertaining the true intention of the parties is not applicable to India in the face of S. 92. 27 I.A. 58 Foll.; 4 B. 594; 9 C. 528; 16 M. 80; 25 C. 603; 28 C. 256; 28 C. 289 Dissappr. 25 M. 7; 30 B. 119 Appr. S. 92, however, applied as between the parties only. Wherever accordingly evidence is tendered as to a transaction with a third party, it is governed not by the section but by the ordinary rules of equity and good conscience. Where therefore a person takes a sale-deed knowing that a third person is the owner of the property and the vendor is only a mortgagee and the intention of the parties is merely to transfer the mortgage, oral evidence is admissible to prove the real nature of the transaction. Semble. Even if S. 92 applied to the case, proviso (1), would admit the oral evidence, as it would be a fraud to insist upon a claim to property arising out of such a transaction, the claimant knowing that the true owner had never parted with it. ——Ss. 92 and 99—Third parties—Sale—Evidence to show that transaction was a mortgage—Admissibility.

S. 99 of the Evidence Act is an enabling section; S. 92 is a disqualifying section. The word 'varying' in S. 99 of the Evidence Act covers the same ground as the words 'contradicting, varying, adding to or subtracting from' in S. 92 of the Act. S. 99 provides that persons who are not parties to a document, or

———S. 92—Third parties—Parties on the same side—Admissibility of oral evidence.

S. 92 of the Evidence Act merely prevents evidence being given to vary the terms of a document in a proceeding between the parties to the document and their representatives. Two persons who are arrayed on the same side such as joint vendees can give evidence to vary the terms of the written instrument in a contest among themselves. (Mittra, A.J.C.) RAJIB HUSAIN v. ZINGARAJI. 34 I.C. 962.

———S. 92—Third parties—Real nature of transaction—Evidence of—Admissibility.

S. 92 of the Evidence Act is confined to proceedings between the parties to the deed or their representative in interest and has no application to claims by or against third persons. Parties to a transaction which is not really an out and out sale are not estopped in a suit for pre-emption brought by a third party from showing the real nature of transaction even when the document evidencing the transfer stands in the form of a sale-deed. Variation of Terms.

———S. 92—Variation of terms—Oral evidence—Admissibility to prove variation of a registered instrument optionally registrable.

A mortgage was made by plaintiff to defendant comprising 3 items of property for an advance of Rs. 99 and was registered. In pursuance of this the mortgagee took possession of the first item and another property in lieu of the second item. Plaintiff paid into Court Rs. 99 and claimed redemption of the two items alleging that by an oral agreement the second item in defendant's possession was given him in lieu of second item in the registered deed. Defendant pleaded inadmissibility of extrinsic evidence as regards item 2 and that the claim with regard to this item was barred by limitation. Held, (1) that the plaintiff was entitled to lead evidence to prove the two facts, viz., that the defendant's possession of the 2nd item was that of mortgagee and never adverse to him; (2) that his right to possession was terminated by payment of Rs. 99 only tendered. ———S. 92—Variation of terms—Agreement complete in itself.

A contract for sale of land was entered into by means of a writing appearing in the books of one of the parties. It was signed by both parties and witnessed. The defendant said that the agreement appearing in the book did not contain the whole of the agreement arrived at between the parties but there was an oral agreement that if anybody else per chance offered more than Rs. 500 to the 1st defendant above the agreed amount before the expiry of the period in the agreement, the agreement with the plaintiff was to be treated as null and void. Held, the evidence about the oral agreement was not admissible. It may very well be that a writing may be an imperfect agreement of which a Court cannot decree specific performance, but if on the face of it, it contains all the terms which would entitle it to be considered as a perfect agreement which could be enforced, then undoubtedly no parol evidence could be adduced so as to alter or add to its terms unless they came within one of the provises of S. 92. ———S. 94—Interpretation of document—Principle—Evidence.

Where the language used is plain and applies accurately to existing facts, evidence is not admissible for showing that it was not meant to apply to those facts. Where the words used are definite and unambiguous, the Courts must not travel outside the words used to found or confirm speculations, as to the parties to the document having in fact intended other than what they have said. (Spencer and Coutts-Trotter, JJ.) VELAPPA v. PALANI. 29 I.C. 201=(1915) M.W.N. 325.

Where the language of a document is clear and applies without difficulty to the facts of the case, no extrinsic evidence can be admitted for the purpose of affecting its interpretation. 22 A. 149, P.C., Expl. (Lindsay, J.C.) YAR MAHOMED KHAN v. BAQAR KHAN. 40 I.C. 491=4 O.L.J. 318.

———S. 94—Decree—Ambiguity as to rate of interest.

of the house but the boundaries given below apply only to a portion of the same and both read together do not apply correctly either to the whole house or to a portion of it, a case of latent ambiguity arises. Extrinsic evidence is admissible for the purpose of solving the question whether by the description of the property taken as a whole the intention was to convey the whole house or only a portion of it. (Wasir Hasan, A.J.C.) ABDUL GHANI v. ASHIQ HUSAIN. 8 O.L.J. 521= 3 U.P.L.R. (J.C.) 93=1922 Oudh 162.

———Ss. 95, 96, 97—Mortgage—Erroneous description of the property—Rectification of mistake.

Where a mortgage deed by a mistake described the mortgaged property as bearing Tauzi No. 6607 but it was found that the mortgagor owned Tauzi No. 9907, held, that it was open to the mortgagee to prove by evidence what the property actually mortgaged was and that the mortgagor could not claim any exoneration on the ground of misdescription of the property. (Jwala Prasad and Ross, JJ.) MT. WAJIBUNNISSA BEGAM v. VALMIKI SAHAY. 71 I.C. 589= 1 Pat. L.R. 80.

When a description is partly correct and partly incorrect and the former part is sufficient to identify the subject-matter intended while the latter does not apply to any subject, the erroneous part will be rejected on the maxim that a false description will not hurt when it can exist with the subject itself. (Raymond and Madgaonkar, A.J.C.) NARAIN DAS v. TEKCHAND. 1923 Sindh 42.

———S. 96—Latent ambiguity— Admissibility of evidence.

When an instrument appears on its face to be free from ambiguity, but upon the endeavour being made to apply it to the persons or things indicated, it transpires that the words are equally applicable to two or more persons or to two or more things, this is called a latent ambiguity. In such a case extrinsic evidence is admissible to resolve it. The principle that when an instrument contains an ambiguity, evidence of user under it may be given in order to show the sense in which the parties employed the language used applies to a modern as well as an ancient instrument. the deed or as it might be reassessed from time to time, evidence may be given under S. 96 of the Evidence Act of facts to show what was meant. In the absence of a contract to the contrary, the mortgagee will pay the revenue as assessed from time to time. The parties must have foreseen the enhancement of revenue within the period allowed for redemption. Evidence of this nature will, however, be outweighed by an express declaration of the parties even two years after the execution of the mortgage-deed. (*Lyle and Ashworth, A. J. ———S. 103—Benami — Money paid by another.

Where property is purchased in the name of another the burden of proving that the purchaser has no beneficial interest in the property and that the purchase is really benami lies on the person alleging it. Payment of money by one and purchase in another's name does not establish a benami transaction if the payer intended to benefit the ostensible purchaser. (Kensington, C.J. and Shah Din, J.) MAHIDITTA MAL v. MRS. NICHOLSON.

The burden of proving that a sale is nominal lies primarily on the person alleging it, but where the vendee can produce none of the documents which form the basis of his case and there is no satisfactory evidence as to possession, the burden of proof is thrown on him. (Wallis, C.J. and Phillips, J.) RAGHNATHA CHARI v. ARAVAMUTHU AIYANGAR.
34 I.C. 617.

———Ss. 102 and 103—Benami—Sham transaction—Onus—Sale-deed — Non-delivery of possession.

In a suit for a declaration that a sale-deed was a nominal transaction the burden of proof is on the plaintiff to prove any circumstances relied on for the purpose of showing that the sale was not real and honest. The question whether possession passed under the sale to the vendee is a material factor though not a decisive circumstance. Even here the onus is on the plaintiffs to prove that possession did not pass and not on the defendant to show that possession did pass. (Sundara Aiyar and Sadasiva Aiyar, JJ.) SAMA LAXMIAH CHETTY v. MANIKKA CHETTY. 16 I.C. 749.

———Ss. 101, 103—Benami—Onus of proof—Sale by husband in favour of wife.

When a sale-deed executed by a husband in favour of his wife is challenged as a benami transaction, the onus is upon the person challenging it to prove by evidence that the apparent state of things is not the real state of things. Mere suspicion does not amount to proof. The mere fact that the husband continued to live in the house or that he had some debts is insufficient. The production of the sale-deed from one's custody is sufficient proof of his title unless and until some evidence is adduced by the other side to disprove it. (Mullick and Kulwant Sahay, JJ.) Carrier.

———S. 103—Carrier—Railway Risk Note Form B—Loss of goods—Burden of proof.

If the plaintiffs wish the Court to believe that there was wilful neglect or theft by railway servants, it lies on them to prove the fact. In the absence of proof of wilful neglect or theft by railway servants the administration is to be held free from responsibility in the case of a risk note in Form B. If, however, neglect or theft by railway servants is proved the administration will escape liability for loss, if proof is given of robbery from a running train. (Scott, C.J. and Hayward, J.) B. EVIDENCE ACT (I of 1872), Ss. 101, 102, 103—Consideration.

The fact that a usufructuary mortgagee took no steps to recover possession of the mortgaged property until the last day of the limitation raises a presumption that he did not consider himself entitled to it; and therefore, the Court below was justified in saying that the burden of proving consideration lies on the mortgagee. (Stanley, C.J. and Banerjee, J.) BEHARI v. RAMCHANDAR. 33 All. 483 = 10 I.C. 927 = 8. L.J. 368.

———Ss. 102, 103—Consideration—Recitals in bond—Denial of execution found to be false—Inference of consideration.

In a suit to enforce a bond the defendant denied execution as well as consideration. The Court found that the bond was genuine and from the recital therein drew an inference that the bond was supported by consideration. Held, that there was no error of law committed by the lower Court. ——Ss. 102 and 103—Consideration—Recital in deed—Stranger.

Where a mortgagor denies consideration for a mortgage duly executed by him and the deed contains a recital that money was paid, the onus is upon the mortgagor to prove the falsity of the recital. If the claim is contested by a stranger who denies execution and consideration, the onus is on the mortgagee to prove his case. 12 M.I.A. 282; 6 Cal. 268, foll. (Mookerjee and Buckland, JJ.) EVIDENCE ACT (I of 1872), Ss. 101, 102, 103 —Consideration.

——S. 101—Consideration—Deed formally registered.

Where a document is formally registered and the receipt of consideration is recorded therein, the burden of proving the non-payment of consideration is on the person asserting the non-payment. But in the case of an account book, the onus lies on the person asserting payment. (Broadway and Abdul Roof, JJ.) RULIA SINGH v. TUNIMAL. 60 I.C. 730.

——S. 102—Consideration — Promissory note—Admission of execution.

Where in a suit on a pro-note the defendant admits execution but pleads want of consideration the burden of proof is on him to prove his plea. (Shadi Lal and Martineau, JJ.) ANANT RAM v. THE BHARAT NATIONAL BANK, LTD. 56 I.C. 638.

——Ss. 102 and 103—Consideration—Presumption as to receipt of.

The vendor's admission at the time of registration of his having received consideration throws the onus on him to show that he did not in fact receive it; and the onus is not discharged by mere denial of such receipt. (Scott-Smith and Shadi Lal, JJ.) RAHMAT v. ZABITA. 37 I.C. 874=29 P.W.R. 1917.

——S. 103—Consideration—Onus of proof—Mortgage.

In a suit brought against the heirs of an original debtor for the recovery of moneys advanced on the security of mortgage-deeds the plaintiff must establish that full consideration passed. (Chevis and Le Rossignol, JJ.) INDAR NARAIN v. NANAK CHAND. 74 P.W R. 1916=32 I.C. 464= 58 P.R. 1917.

——S. 102—Consideration — Promissory note—Admission of execution.

If a defendant admits execution of the pronote and pleads absence of consideration the onus is upon the plaintiff, but such onus is shifted to the defendant as in this case he was a man of business with sound knowledge of English who had admitted having received a portion of the consideration and signed a pro note expressly providing that it was 'for value received'. 17 P.R 1888, Dist. (Shah Din and Le Rossignol, JJ.) CHIRAG DIN v. BHAGWAN DAS. 100 P.R. 1915=31 I.C. 40=169 P.W.R. 1915.

The onus is on executant to prove non-receipt of consideration after he had acknowledged to have received it at the time of registration. (Johnstone, C.J. and Le Rossignol, J.) JOWALA SINGHA v. TULSA RAM. 78 P.R. 1915= 31 I.C. 212=173 P.W.R. 1915.

——S. 103—Consideration — Burden of proof of non-receipt of full consideration.

A mortgagor disputing the receipt of a portion of the mortgage money which he admitted to be due by him before Sub-Registrar, has to show that the consideration did not pass in full. (Rattigan and Scott-Smith, JJ.) KISHEN CHAND v. SOHAN LAL 20 P.L.R. 1918=26 I.C. 913= 245 P.W.R. 1915.

——Ss. 102 and 103—Consideration—Delay in Suing for possession—Registered sale.

When, after a very long delay the vendee sues for possession of the property sold to him the onus is on him to show consideration for the sale. 68 P.R. 1900, Fol. (Kensington, C.J. and Beadon, J.) BHAGWAN DAS v RAM BAI. 53 P.R, 1914=236 P.L R. 1914= 25 I.C. 536=152 P.W.R. 1914.

The passing of consideration for a mortgage-deed which is more than 30 years old and which was never questioned till the suit thereon was brought, should be taken as proved even though there is no direct strong evidence as it is expected in recent transactions. (Sadasiva Aiyar and Spencer, JJ.) JAGANA SANYASIAH v. M. P. ATCHANNA NAIDU. 42 M.L J. 339= 70 I.C. 759=15 L.W. 289.

——Ss. 102 and 103—Consideration—Acknowledgment of receipt of consideration—Effect of.

More proof of acknowledgment of receipt of consideration does not necessarily shift the burden or must not necessarily be taken as insufficient to shift the burden of proof. (Ayling and Tyabji, JJ.) GADIAN CHETTY v. VEERAPPA CHETTI. 26 I.C. 899= 28 M.L.J. 92.

——Ss. 102 and 103—Consideration—Proof—Registration not conclusive—Securities without consideration.

Where in a suit on a hypothecation bond, the consideration is denied, the mere execution and registration of a bond, without proof that money had passed, without documentary evidence to show what sums were advanced, without production of account books, is not conclusive on the point that consideration passed between the parties. Securities in respect of which there was no consideration could not be made securities for other unconnected expenses defrayed. ——S. 103—Consideration—Failure of—Onus.

Plaintiff brought a suit to set aside a release deed on the ground that there was failure of consideration. Defendant admitted that the consideration mentioned in the deed was false, but contended that there was consideration. Held, that it lay on the plaintiff to prove want of consideration. The assignee must prove the reality of the consideration in the case of an assignment. (Krishnaswami Aiyar and Ayling, JJ.) AYYALAMMAI SARVAIGARAR v. NALLASWAMI PILLAI. 10 I.C. 291=9 M.L.T. 407.

——Ss. 102 and 103—Consideration — Sale-deeds—Rival purchasers.

In a dispute regarding the title of two rival purchasers of the same property, when the vendor in the first sale-deed admits receipt of consideration, the onus of proof lies on the subsequent purchaser to show that consideration was not paid. The fact that the first purchaser did not get possession for a long time does not prove absence of consideration. (Batten, J.C.) MT. KASTUR BAI v. BALIKAM. 1923 Nag. 15.

——S. 103—Consideration — Fiduciary relation—Sale to a person in a position of active confidence.

In the case of a person in a position of active confidence the onus is on the vendee to prove that the transaction was for consideration and for good faith. 11 M.I.A. 551, Fol. (Batten, A.J.C.) SURATSINGH v. BALDEO. 17 I.C. 363=8 N.L.R. 160.

——S. 103—Consideration—Non-receipt of.

The burden of proof as to the non-receipt of the consideration money for a bond, the execution of which is proved, is on the executant. (Kanhaiya Lal, A.J.C.) LACHMAN PRASAD v. HARDEO BAKSH. 37 I.C. 31= 3 O.L.J. 473

——S. 103 — Consideration — Mortgage—Want of onus,

The onus of proving want of consideration lies heavily on the party alleging it. But if it is found that he is a man of weak intellect and hard of hearing who played the part of an irresponsible puppet in the hands of the opposite party, the onus is mitigated, and the Court might for its own satisfaction demand proof of consideration from the opposite party. Where a defendant admits execution of a deed but pleads failure of consideration and undue influence, the burden of proving these lies on him. (Lindsay, A.J.C.) DEBI PRASAD v. SHEO NARAIN. 21 I.C. 581.

Where receipt of consideration before the Registering Officer is admitted in a deed of assignment, the onus is on the assignor to prove want of consideration. (Piggott, J.C. and Sabonadiere, A.J.C.) NAND KISHORE v. MANGAL DIN. 21 I.C. 8.

EVIDENCE ACT (I of 1872), Ss. 101, 102, 103 —Consideration.

——Ss. 102 and 103—Consideration—Purchaser of equity of redemption.

A purchaser of an equity of redemption cannot be in a better position than the mortgagor himself; so the burden would lie on the purchaser to prove want of consideration. Where in such cases the mortgagor himself has not raised the plea of undue influence or unconscionable bargain, the purchaser who buys the property subject to such a mortgage cannot take those pleas and ask the Court to reduce the interest on such grounds. (Lindsay, A.J.C.) RAM KUMAR v. DWARAKA PRASAD. 16 I.C. 5=15 O.C. 211.

If under the terms of a mortgage a portion of the consideration is left with the mortgagee for payment to some creditors, the mortgagee in the first instance has to prove payment. The execution of mortgage and the proceedings at the time of registration involve no admission that the mortgagee had fulfilled his part of the contract. (Piggott, J.C.) BHIKAM SINGH v. RADHA KUNWAR. 14 I.C. 186.

——Ss. 102 and 103—Consideration—Want of—Admission in sale-deed.

Where the execution of a sale-deed is admitted by the defendant, the burden is on him to establish that consideration did not pass. (Coutts and Das, JJ.) HARI PRASAD CHOWDHURY v. HARIHAR PRASAD CHOWDHURY. (1923) Pat. 20=1923 P. 205.

——Ss. 102 and 103—Consideration—Sale of land—Title-deeds handed over to vendee—Presumption.

Mere denial by the vendor of the receipt of the consideration acknowledged in the recitals of deed of sale is not in all cases sufficient to cast upon the vendee the burden of proving the payment of the consideration especially when the vendee has been in possession and enjoyment of the subject-matter and in possession of the title-deeds. ——S. 102 — Consideration — Onus — Recitals.

If a mortgage-deed expressly mentions the passing of consideration from the mortgagee to the mortgagor, the onus of proving the contrary in a suit on the mortgage is on the mortgagor and his representatives in interest. Where, however, it is found that the vendor was in possession of the property for 18 years after the sale and had enjoyed the rents and profits of the same and exercised rights of ownership over it, the burden of proving consideration is shifted on to the purchaser. 8 A. 461 ; 33 A. 483, Foll. by payments endorsed on the bond. The trial court, on review of the evidence held that the endorsements were fictitious and decided in favour of the plaintiff. But the High Court on appeal dismissed the suit. Held, that though the initial burden of proof rests on the appellants in such a case as this, both on general grounds and by reason of S. 114 of the Evidence Act, this burden shifts easily as the evidence is developed and much importance could not be attached in this case to the question on whom the initial onus lay. The evidence in this litigation, taken as a whole was of such a character and so full of doubtful statements that it could only be weighed adequately by the Judge who had seen the witnesses and the balance of probabilities was also on the side of the conclusion reached by the trial Judge. Exception to rule.

———S. 103—Exception to rule—Disqualification to succeed as heir.

Leprosy to be a ground of exclusion must be of the sanious or ulcerous and not of the unaesthetic type. The presumption of Hindu Law is against disqualification and the burden of proof of disqualifications lies on a person who seeks to exclude another who would be an heir, should no case of exclusion be established. Where it is contended that a person is excluded from inheritance by reason of disease, the strictest proof of the disease as will disqualify him, at the time the succession opened, will be required. EVIDENCE ACT (I of 1872), Ss. 101, 102, 103 —Onus Immaterial.

———Ss. 102 and 103—Onus immaterial—After evidence is taken.

The question of onus of proof only arises where there is a question of fact to be determined and there is no evidence one way or the other which will enable the Judge to come to a conclusion. In such a case, the Court has to decide whether the burden of proving the fact lies upon the plaintiff or the defendant. Whether in the first instance, the onus lies upon the plaintiff or upon the defendant if there is evidence adduced by both the parties then the question of the burden of proof becomes immaterial and the Court has to determine upon the evidence before it. Title.

———Ss. 102, 103—Title—Dispute as to boundary line—Onus of proof—Waste land.

On questions of boundary, specially where the dividing line in dispute runs through waste lands which have not been the subject of definite possession, the rule as to the burden of proving the affirmative is not applicable. The litigants are in the position of counter-claimants and both parties are bound to do what they can to aid the Court in ascertaining the true line. But the duty of both parties to aid the Court in ascertaining the true line is in cases where the dividing line in dispute runs through waste lands which have not been the subject of definite possession. This rule is not applicable where the case of both parties is that the land was capable of possession and each party was in actual possession of the land comprised within his tenure. 21 C. 501, Dist; 27 C.L.J. 599, Ref. ——S. 105—Exemptions — Presumption—Burden of proof.

EVIDENCE ACT (I of 1872), S. 105.

The law requiries that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of the general exceptions in the Penal Code to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused. But this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record whether produced by the prosecution or the defence, that the general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to the satisfaction of the Court that the accused comes within the exception. ———S. 105—Exception—Burden of proof.

The incidence of the burden of proof means that the person on whom it lies must prove that fact. But the meaning of the expression "proved" as defined in S. 3 of the Evidence Act, is in no way affected by the incidence of the burden of proof. When evidence has been given by the defence to support the defence of an exception, the burden of proof is discharged, if the evidence is believed and the jury have their ordinary duty of deciding a question of fact on the evidence before them. ———S. 110—Converse not true.

The presumption that plaintiff having the title also has possession, can properly be made, in the case of jungle or waste land where there is no proof or very little proof of acts of ownership having been exercised on either side, or where the evidence as to such act or such ownership is very nearly equal. Though S. 110 of the Evidence Act recognises a presumption that the person in possession also has a good title there is no corresponding section saying that the person with the title should be presumed to be in possession. This presumption is one that can only come under S. 114 of the Evidence Act which allows the Court to presume the existence of any fact which it thinks likely to have happened, regard being had to the common course of natural events &c. Proof of possession varies with the nature of the property in respect of which possession is questioned. ——S. 110—Waste land—Possession, when evidence of title.

In case of waste lands, the Court would seize upon the slightest evidence of occupation for proof of title, but the occupation or the acts of user must be such as to indicate the intention to hold for oneself, for without such intent there is no possession. Under the section, possession short of the statutory period which may give a title by prescription, is sufficient to raise a presumption of ownership and shift the burden of proof of title on the other party; when neither side can show title, the possession which attracts the presumption of ownership must be a possession founded on a prima facie right. Even if mere wrongful possession is taken to be sufficient to shift the burden of proof, circumstances may show that such wrongful possession was merely that of a licensee and not of an owner. To rebut the presumption of a child's legitimacy, there must be strong, distinct, satisfactory and conclusive evidence that the husband before or after marriage had not access to his wife. ———S. 112—Date of conception.

S. 112 refers only to a presumption of legitimacy and has no reference to date of conception. If the son wants to rely on the defence that he was conceived before the date of an alienation by the father he must prove it

If a child is born 11 months after the marital intercourse between the parents had ceased, it is illegitimate. (White, C.J., Ayling and Oldfield, JJ.) JOHN HOWE v. CHARLOTTE HOWE. 38 Mad. 466=(1913) M.W.N. 983=25 M.L.J. 694=21 I.C. 645=14 M.L.T. 447.

——S. 112—Proof of non-access—Father disowning son—Onus on father.

In a suit for partition, B disowned his son A, alleging that A's mother was living apart from him and that he had no access to her. It was proved that there were counter-suits for maintenance and restitution of conjugal rights and that there was a subsequent reconciliation and acknowledgment of legitimacy. Held, that the onus of proving non-access lay on the father B. ——S. 112—Legitimacy—Presumption.

Before a presumption of legitimacy can arise under S. 112 of the Evidence Act, all the facts specified in the section must be proved. (Ballifax, A.J.C.) MAROTI v. BHAGI. 68 I.C. 455.

——S. 112—Mahomedan Law—Legitimacy—Presumption.

A child begotten by zina cannot be made legitimate by the subsequent marriage of its parents before its birth, and S. 112 of the Act is inapplicable to Mahomedans. (Stanyon, A.J.C.) ZAKIRALI v. SOGRABI. 43 I.C. 883=15 N.L.R. 1.

——S. 112—Legitimacy — Presumption—Rule as to, if supersedes the Muhammadan Law on the subject.

The rule as to legitimacy contained in S. 112 of the Evidence Act is a rule of procedure and not of substantive law and as such applicable to Muhammadans. (Daniels, J.) HAJIRA KHUTAN v AMINA KHUTAN. 73 I.C. 983.

——Ss 112 and 114—Legitimacy—General presumption.

Where a party admits the paternity of the other party but pleads that he is of illegitimate descent, the legal presumption being in favour of legitimacy, the onus lies on the party alleging illegitimacy to prove it. (Lindsay, J.C.) DULAREY SINGH v. SURAJ BALI SINGH. 43 I.C. 478=4 O.L.J. 516.

A child born within 280 days of its father's death, the mother not having remarried in the interval, is presumed to be the legitimate child of the deceased and the onus of proving that the deceased had no access to his wife at or about the time when the child could have been begotten, is on the person who alleges it. EVIDENCE ACT (I of 1872), S. 114.

——S. 112—Presumption as to legitimacy and marriage—Burden of proof.

There is a legal presumption in favour of legitimacy and marriage and the burden of proving illegitimacy is on the person interested in making it out. (Lindsay, J.C.) APABHAL SINGH v. NARAPAT SINGH. 23 I.C. 972=1 O.L.J. 89.

Where the question of paternity, is one of evidence only, the case is governed by S. 112 of the Act and not by the personal law of the parties. The presumption of legitimacy created by S. 112 can be rebutted only by proof of non-access leaving no room for doubt. If the husband has had access, the wife's adultery will not justify a finding of illegitimacy. Proof of impotence would be equivalent to proof of non-access. EVIDENCE ACT (I of 1872), S. 114—Applicability.

Applicability.

——S. 114—Applicability—Price fixed in agreement to sell—Presumption as to quantity of estate.

The normal presumption that in fixing the property in an agreement of sale, regard was had on both sides to the quantity which both proposed the estate to consist of, yet there may be considerations which may rebut or waken the presumption. (Mr. Ameer Ali,) HUSSONALLY SULLEMANJI v. TRIBHUVANADAS MANGAL DAS. (1920) M.W.N. 726=25 C.W.N. 385= 61 I.C. 361=3 U.P.L.R. (P.C.) (1) (P.C.)

Where a deed of further charge provided that there were two bonds by which plots were mortgaged and that as the money due under the deed of further charge, was not paid, those two bonds shall not be redeemed, and where there was nothing to show as to what the bonds referred to in the deed of further charge or that they referred to the bonds in suit, held, that it could not be presumed that is referred to the deeds in suit; and that it was for the defendants who were setting up a special covenant, to prove it. (Daniels, A.J.C.) BHUP SINGH v. LAZIM SINGH. 65 I C. 121 (2)=24 O C. 319.

——S. 114—Applicability — Property—Undivided — Exclusive possession for a long time.

There is no presumption that the property left by a person long deceased is part of an undivided estate. It may require much, or very little evidence to sufficiently prove that the property is undivided, but when land has been in exclusive possession of others for a long period, the person asserting that it forms part of an undivided estate, should be required to prove the fact. Compliance with the law.

——S. 114—Compliance with law.

——S 114—Compliance with law—Regularity of judicial and official acts—Sheristadar of Court signing process by order.

Where the sheristadar of a Court signed a warrant of attachment of moveable property in execution of a decree and the sheristadar signed "by order" of the Court. Held, that the presumption in S. 114, Ill. (e) of the Evidence Act applied to the case and that, in the absence of anything to the contrary, it could be presumed that he was the officer to sign the warrant as required by O. 21, R. 24 (2) C.P. Code. (Newbould and Suhrawardy, JJ.) GIRDHAR SARKAR v. HARISHCHANDRA CHOWDHURY. 37 C.L J. 331=27 C.W.N. 1012= 24 Cr.L J. 534=1923 Cal. 584.

——S. 114—Compliance with Laws—Judgment silent on point raised in the memo of appeal—Presumption.

Where an appellate judgment is silent on a point which is specifically mentioned in the grounds of appeal, the inference can be drawn that it was given up. To hold otherwise would be to contravene S. 114, and to presume that the Court failed to do its duty. (Abdul Raoof and Harrison, JJ.) ABDUL KARIM v. THAKAR RAM JAGGU RAM. 1923 Lah. 124.

——S. 114—Compliance with Law—Identification parade—Presumption of regularity of.

The presumption under S. 114 of the Evidence Act is hardly sufficient to satisfy a Court that such precautions have been taken as to render an identification truly valuable. (Harrison, J.) KALLU v. EMPEROR. 4 Lah. L J. 448=23 Cr. L.J. 449= 4 U.P.L R. (Lah.) 95=1923 Lah 31.

The Court can presume that the Revenue Board has exercised lawful powers in revision. (Ayling and Odgers, JJ.) SRINIVASA RAO v. RANGASAMY. 18 L.W. 823=1924 Mad. 326.

EVIDENCE ACT (I of 1872), S. 114—Compliance with the law.

———S. 114—Compliance with Law—Legal title—Possession—Alleging possession as trespasser.

Where possession can be referred to a lawful origin the presumption is that it was acquired lawfully and the burden of proving the contrary is on the party who alleges it, e.g, the burden would be on the party who alleges that he held the property as trespasser where he ought to hold as legatee or heir. (Daniels and Lyle, A.J.Cs.) KUAR NAGESHAR SAHAI v. SHIAM BAHADUR. 1922 Oudh. 231.

———S. 114 — Compliance with Law—Official acts—Presumption—Objection to jurisdiction.

The presumption is that official acts are legally performed and where the jurisdiction of a settlement officer has not been questioned in the trial Court, it must be presumed that he acted regularly and within his jurisdiction. (Coutts and Ross, JJ.) BABU BALGOBIND v. RAI BEHARI LAL. 1923 Pat. 114 = 3 P.L.T. 617 = 1923 P. 96 (2).

———S. 114—Compliance with Law—Presumption of accuracy of survey records.

The presumption in favour of survey records of rights cannot be displaced by Batwara or irrigation maps. (Jwala Prasad and Adami, JJ.) SITA RAM TEWARI v. GAYA PRASAD. 1923 P. 37.

———S. 114, Compliance with Law—Official acts done correctly.

Whereas a Court may presume official acts as regularly performed, it cannot presume that they were correctly done The identity of persons alleged to have made certain admissions in butwara proceedings cannot be presumed but must be proved by the person relying on those admissions. Though butwara papers are admissible, the Court has to decide in each case whether it would rebut the presumption of the correctness of the Record-of-Rights. (Das and Adami, JJ.) JAGDEO v. BULAKI. 1921 Pat. 343 = 63 I.C. 256 = 2 P.L.T. 348.

Conflict of Presumption.

———S. 114—Conflict of presumptions.

Where there are two presumptions and both are equally balanced, the Court must prefer that which best accords with facts. (Scott, C. J. and Chandavarkar, J.) SHRINIVAS v. BALWANT VENKATESH. 37 Bom. 513 = 20 I.C. 162 = 16 Bom. L.R. 533.

———S. 114—Conflict of presumption—Important witness not called—How to be avoided.

Per Buckland, J.—If a party wishes not to have a presumption raised against him by the fact that an important witness had not been called, he should exhaust to the utmost of his power every means to bring that witness before the Court. (Mookerjee and Buckland, JJ.) JOGENDRA KRISHNA ROY v. KURPAL HARSHI & CO. 49 Cal. 818 = 35 C.L.J. 175. 1922 Mad. 345.

EVIDENCE ACT (I of 1872), Ss. 114—Corroboration.

Consideration.

———S. 114—Consideration — Presumption—Endowment.

An endorsement of satisfaction of a mortgage-deed need not necessarily import receipt of consideration, since the English method of procedure by deed, on the principle that a deed imported consideration, has no application in India. (Scott, C.J. and Batchelor, J.) BAI JAYAGAVARI v. PURSHOTAMDAS SUNDER LAL. 44 I.C. 916 = 20 Bom. L.R. 77.

Corroboration.

Where the law provides that a presumption arises under certain circumstances, that presumption must arise independently of whether there is any corroboration or no. (Newbould, J.) CHANDRA KISHORE HADI v. SHEIKH KUDRAT. 52 I.C. 480.

The accused was charged with dacoity. The approver himself at first stated most definitely that he did not recognise the accused as being one of the party concerned in the dacoity. He subsequently retracted from this statement and declared that he did recognize him; but that was only after he had been pressed by the prosecution: Held, the statement first made should be accepted. Where the only corroboration was the recovery of certain articles, alleged to be some of the articles stolen and subsequently produced from the house of the accused, his house was searched in his absence and he was given no opportunity of checking the results of the search or giving any explanation as to how the articles came into that house, and there was no evidence as to where the respective ornaments were found, nor was any thing said as to who produced them: Held that there was no sufficient corroboration, (Fforde, J.) SAUDAGAR SINGH v. EMPEROR. 3 L.L.J. 572 = 1923 Lah. 683.

Without material corroboration there should be no conviction, when accused can explain the presence of the articles found with them. (Broadway, J.) SULEMAN v. EMPEROR. 1923 Lah. 385.

———Ss. 114 and 133 — Corroboration — Accomplice—Evidence of.

S. 133 of the Evidence Act contains the rule of law regarding the testimony of accomplices and S. 114, Illn. (b) is merely a guide to assist the Court though in a vast majority of cases, prudence requires that there should be coroboration. No hard and fast rule can be laid down to regulate the extent and nature of the corroboration, this being dependant entirely on the circumstances of the case. (Scott-Smith and Broadway, JJ.) NARAIN DAS v. EMPEROR. 3 Lah. 144 = 4 L.L.J. 91 = 23 Cr. L.J. 818 = 9 P.W.R. (1922) Cr. = 1923 Lah. 1.

EVIDENCE ACT (I of 1872), S. 114—Corroboration.

The evidence of the accomplice was held to be sufficiently corroborated by the discovery of blood marks on the person and in the house of the accused as well as his suspicious conduct immediately after the murder. (Sir Shadi Lal, C.J. and Moti Sagar, J.) GHULAM HUSSAIN v. EMPEROR. 4 Lah. L J. 405.

——S. 114—Corroboration—Accomplice—Testimony of—Weight due to—Presumption.

An approver's evidence is in itself tainted evidence though in some cases it may be worthy of belief for various reasons but the uncorroborated statement of an approver taken at the end of the trial is of very little evidentiary value. (Shadi Lal, C.J. and Wilberforce, J.) SUNDER SINGH v. EMPEROR. 66 I.C. 187 = 4 Lah. L.J. 284.

——S. 114—Corroboration—Accomplice—Evidence—Several statements implicating same persons.

In cases where a large number of persons have been arrested by the police and confessions are obtained one after the other, it is likely enough that those confessions should agree. Each man would be likely to name as far as possible those persons who have already been named in the previous confessions. It may, of course, be said that when a man confesses, he does not necessarily know the details of the previous confession made by another accused, but it does not necessarily follow that he should be unable to ascertain what persons have been implicated in the previous confessions, from the subordinate police officers concerned with the investigation of the case. Consequently the fact of any particular person having been named in the confession of more than one of the co-accused is not a sufficiently reliable corroboration of the statement of the approver, (Chevis, J.) LALA v. EMPEROR 23 Cr. L.J. 158 = 65 I.C. 622 = 3 P.W R. (1922) Cr.

To support a conviction on the statement of an approver especially of one whose initial statement was very long delayed, the statement requires material corroboration connecting each individual accused with the crime committed. (Harrison, J.) SARDARA v. EMPEROR. 63 I.C. 612 = 22 Cr. L J 676.

——S. 114—Corroboration—Bribe giver—What amounts to.

The merits of the case to decide which in favour of the bride-giver, a Judge accepts the illegal gratification, are a sufficient corroboration of the former who is really an accomplice. (Ratligan, C.J.) HARSUK ROY v. EMPEROR. 3 P.W.R. Cr. 1919.

——S. 114—Corroboration—Testimony of accomplice—English and Indian Law.

EVIDENCE ACT (I of 1872), S. 114—Course of Natural Events.

The law in this country regarding corroboration of an accomplice's evidence does not differ from the English law. Corroboration need not be required in every detail of the crime, otherwise the testimony of the accomplice would not be essential to the case but would be merely confirmatory of other and independent testimony. The corroboration must be by some evidence other than that of an accomplice and therefore one accomplice's evidence is not corroboration of the testimony of another accomplice. Evidence in corroboration must be independent testimony which affects the accused by connecting or tending to connect him with the crime. The nature of the corroboration necessarily varies according to the particular circumstances of the offence charged. It would be dangerous to formulate the kind of evidence which would be regarded as corroborative except to say that corroborative evidence is evidence which shows or tends to show that the story of the accomplice that the accused committed the crime is true, not merely that the crime has been committed, but that it was committed by the accused. Corroborative evidence need not be direct evidence that the accused committed the crime. It is sufficient if it is merely circumstantial evidence of his connection with the crime. (Kotwal, A.J.C.) KISHAN RAGHUJI CHARAN v. EMPEROR. 23 Cr. L J. 291 = 1922 Nag. 172.

Course of Natural Events.

——S. 114—Course of natural events—Continuance of existing state of things.

Proof of the existence at a particular time of a fact of a continuous nature gives rise to a rebuttable presumption within logical limits that it existed at a subsequent time or has previously existed. The limits of time within which the inference of continuance possesses sufficient probative force to be relevant, must obviously vary with each case—always strongest in the beginning, the inference steadily diminishes in force with the lapse of time at a rate proportionate to the quality of permanence belonging to the fact in question, until it ceases or perhaps is supplanted by a directly opposite inference. To put the matter shortly, it will be inferred that a given set of facts or set of facts whose existence at a particular time is once established in evidence, continues to exist as long as such facts usually exist. The inference of continuance, whether backwards or forwards, whether upwards or downwards, is an inference of fact and may therefore be rebutted. (Mookerjee and Cuming, JJ.) SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. UPENDRA NARAIN ROY. 35 C.L.J. 336 = 1923 Cal. 247.

An inference of approbation of a book of an objectionable character by persons having access to the library of an individual or association, ——S. 114—Criminal trial—Non-production of papers by Crown—Adverse inference.

——S. 114—Criminal trial—Non-production of material evidence.

Where the Crown withholds relevant documents in its possession, the Court will draw an inference adverse to it. 40 M. 402, Ref. (Mookerjee and Chotzner, JJ.) RAJA SREENATH ROY v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA. 50 Cal. 276 = 36 C L.J. 345 = 1923 Cal. 233.

——S. 114—Criminal trial—Absconding accused—Presumption.

No presumption as to guilt can be raised from the fact that the accused has absconded. (Rattigan and Beadon, JJ.) FATTA v. EMPEROR. 31 P.W.R. 1918 = 21 I.C. 478 = 14 Cr. L J. 601 = 314 P.L.R. 19

——S. 114—Criminal trial—Failure to call all witnesses.

If the police consider a witness to be a false witness or his evidence is unnecessary, they would be justified in not sending up that witness as a witness for the prosecution and his absence at the trial ought not to be a reason for disbelieving the prosecution witnesses if they are otherwise worthy of credit. It is of course not for the Police or for the prosecutor to champion a particular theory and to suppress the evidence of a reliable witness simply because his testimony is inconsistent with it. If the witnesses called by the prosecution are otherwise worthy of credit, the Court is not entitled to disbelieve them simply because some persons, who could have thrown light upon the case, have not been put before the Court by the prosecution. Where an unregistered mortgage bond written by plaintiff's servant who was also the vendor of the stamp and attested only by a cousin and partner of the plaintiff, was not sued on for 30 years. Held, the onus is heavily on the plaintiff to prove, not only execution and consideration of the bond but that it was still unpaid. ———S. 114—Discharge—Document creating obligation produced by obligor—Onus of proof—Shifting of.

Under S. 114 (1) of the Evidence Act it is open to the Court to presume that if a document creating an obligation is in the hands of the obligor, the obligation is discharged. But in raising such a presumption, the Court has to take into regard any facts or circumstances indicating that it might have been stolen. The burden shifts as the evidence is developed and when both the parties produce their evidence, the question on whom the initial onus lay ceases to be of much importance. (Kanhaiya Lal, J.C.) EVIDENCE ACT (I of 1872), S. 114—Human Conduct.

Handwriting.

———S. 114 — Handwriting — Will — Improbability of a will entirely written by the testator being forged—Burden of proof.

There is nothing unnatural in a Hindu, sonless and not in a good state of heath writing a document by which directions are given to a widow to adopt the testator's nephew. It is certainly extremely improbable that a person wishing to put forward a forged will would run the risk of imitating the handwriting of the deceased or get it imitated by some one else when it would be so easy to attack a forged document when it runs over a folio page and purports to have been written by the testator. The plaintiff has to prove the document on which he relies but when once he has gone as far as putting before the Court a prima facie case which bears the signs of being genuine, then it is for the defendant to produce reliable grounds for upsetting the plaintiff's case and satisfy the Court that it is not only improbable but impossible. Where a promissory note was alleged to be forged and suits were brought on the last day of limitation: Held, if the promissory note had been signed by the defendant, the plaintiff was entitled to delay bringing the suit, until the last day of limitation; but where the plaintiffs had notice that the defendant repudiated their claim, such a repudiation, if made to claim by a respectable and honest money-lender would have resulted in a suit being brought at once. ———S. 114—Human conduct—Withholding of account books—Presumption.

Defendants 1 and 2 admitted that one A was their partner in Sambat 1964 but alleged that their partnership ended in that very year. They failed to produce any evidence in support of their assertion. The best proof of this alleged dissolution of partnership would have been their own account books, but they did not produce the same. Held, the presumption that arises irresistibly from this withholding of their account books is that the entries therein relating to partnership transactions are contrary to this plea of dissolution. ———S. 114—Human conduct--Presumption as to ordinary course of business.

Where sums are paid before the presiding officer of the Court at the time when a receipt was given for them, the presumption under S. 114 of the Indian Evidence Act is that the ordinary course of business was followed in the case in question. Trusts.

The general rule in principle of the Indian Law as to resulting trusts, differs but little from the general rule of English Law upon the same subject. The decisions have established that Hindus or Mahomedans make transfer or grants for no apparent reason or purpose. Consequently, the presumption of the resulting trust in favour of the person providing the purchase money arises in India and there is no presumption of an intended advancement in favour of the benamidar as there is in England. Where a transaction takes place between persons born in India of British parents and who have resided practically all their life in India, the principles and the rules of law are those of the Court of Chancery in England that will apply to them, which rules of law will apply to any given case in India, will not wholly depend on race, place of birth, domicile or residence. But the widespread and persistent usages and practices of the native inhabitants are more important. The mere statement by the husband or the father that he did not intend to confer any beneficial interest on the donee or transferee is of little avail unless he proves that he had other different motives for the action he took. Their Lordships held on the evidence that the presumption was an advancement to the wife was intended was rebutted (Lord Atkinson.) KERWICK v. KERWICK. 48 Cal. 260 = 47 I.A. 275 = (1920) M.W.N. 738 = 39 M.L.J. 296 = 13 L.W. 466 = 28 M.L.T. 194 = 32 C.L.J. 490 = 23 Bom. ——S. 114, Illn. (g)— Burden of proof—Defendant's failure to produce accounts raises no presumption in his favour.

When a plaintiff sues on a contract he must support his case by conclusive proof of the contract to the Court's satisfaction on the plaintiff's failure to prove his case, there can be no presumption that his case would have been supported by certain account books of the defendant, which in fact were not produced by the defendant. 37 A. 557 P.C, Ref. to. Suspicion though a ground for scrutiny cannot be made the foundation of decision. The production of a bond with an endorsement of payment casts upon the plaintiff, the obligor, the burden of proving that the debt is still outstanding, i.e., that the bond came into defendant's hands by dishonest means, and that the signatures to the endorsement are either forgeries or unauthorised. Where in a suit on a mortgage the defendant pleaded discharge and produced the bond, but there was no endorsement of discharge written thereon and the person through whom the money was said to have been paid was not examined, the Lower Courts were right in holding that the mere production of the bond was not enough to shift the burden of proving the discharge which lay on the defendant. 34 A. 511 P.C. ——S. 115—Acquiescence.

Where a person objected to another putting up a structure on his land and objected before the Municipal authority who however refused to go into a question of title, he cannot in any sense be held to have acquiesced in the act. 21 All. 496 (P.C.) ———S. 115—Acquiescence—Landlord and tenant—Erection of structures—Demolition.

To raise a plea of estoppel against a landlord seeking to demolish structures erected by a tenant, it is not enough for the tenant to show that the landlord stood aside and allowed the structures to be erected. One of the essential elements of equitable estoppel is that the person who sets up that estoppel must have acted in good faith and must have been under the belief that he had a right to put up the buildings. Where the buildings in dispute have been in existence for a long period and certainly for over 12 years and the landlord has been aware of their erection and kept quite all along, he cannot turn round and claim to demolish the buildings so erected. ———S. 115—Acquiescence—Laches—Effect of.

There is a distinction between a case where the acquiescence alleged occurs while the act acquiesced is in progress, and another where acquiescence takes place after the act has been completed. In the former case, the acquiescence is proof of assent. In the latter case, when the act is completed without any knowledge or without any assent on the part of the person whose right is infringed the matter must be determined on very different legal considerations. A right of action has then vested in him, and mere delay to take legal proceedings to redress the injury cannot by itself, constitute a bar to such proceedings unless the delay on his part, after he has acquired full knowledge, has affected or altered the position of his opponent. A person cannot be barred of his remedy on the ground of waiver unless at the time of the alleged waiver he is shown to have been fully cognizant of his right and of the facts of the case. ———S. 115—Attestation—Effect of—Not an estoppel.

Attestation of a deed by itself estops a man from denying nothing whatever excepting that he has witnessed the execution of the deed. ———S. 115—Attestation—Representation.

To give rise to estoppel no actual representation is necessary. 20 C. 296 (P.C.) Ref. It need not be verbal. It is quite enough that the conduct of the party leads another to act in the belief that he asserts no claim to the property. Attestation may in certain cases create an estoppel. If the auction-purchaser allows another to remain in possession for a long time and attests a sale-deed by him, his conduct estops him from claiming the benefit under S. 317 of C.P. Code of 1882. On the death of a Hindu leaving a widow and a daughter his sister's son (the appellant) and other members of the family disputed the right of the widow of the deceased to succeed to the property left by him. The appellant was a party to a compromise of these disputes made in 1892 by which the property was immediately divided. He did not himself take a share under the compromise, but he was thereby recognised as the adopted son of a brother of the deceased whose widow took a share. In 1898 the appellant obtained by relinquishment possession of the share of the property allotted thereby to her. In 1912 the EVIDENCE ACT (I of 1872), S. 115—Conduct.

——S. 115—Conduct—Building on land—Knowledge—Improvements — Silence of landlord.

The estoppel under S. 115 of the Evidence Act may arise by reason of either a declaration, an act or an omission, but in either case there must be an intention on the part of the person against whom the estoppel operates to cause or permit a belief in the mind of another. In the case of mere omission no such intention can well be imputed unless the true facts are known to the person whose omission is in question, but where there is a deliberate declaration or act causing or permitting such belief and inducing another to act upon it, it must be presumed that such declaration or act was intended to have its ordinary and natural effect upon the mind and actions of the other party. 20 C. 296 (P C), Ref. Where a tenant builds on land leased to him under the impression that he has a permanent lease of the same and the landlord encourages him to do this, the latter is estopped from asserting that the lease was an annual one. The rule of law applicable to the case is this. If a man under a verbal agreement with a landlord for a certain interest in land or what amounts to the same thing, under an expectation, created or encouraged by the landlord that he shall have a certain interest takes possession of such land, with the consent of the landlord and upon the faith of such promise or expectation with the knowledge of the landlord and without objection by him, lays out money upon the land, a Court of equity will compel the landlord to give effect to such promise or expectations. 21 C.W.N. 903; 4 C.W.N. 462; 23 W.R. 399; 29 B. 580; *Ramsden v. EVIDENCE ACT (I of 1872), S. 115—Execution Sale.

A party to a suit who having a charge or encumbrance on the property in suit ordered to be sold, fails to have that charge or encumbrance notified in the sale proclamation, is estopped from subsequently setting up his lien against the auction-purchaser. The doctrine of estoppel cannot be said to rest absolutely upon any notice of duty on the part of the person sought to be estopped. And the word 'omission' used in S. 115 does not mean merely an omission to perform such a duty as is prescribed by law. (Lindsay, J C.) MANIK RAM v. RAM AUTAR. 27 I.C. 611= 2 O.L.J. 22.

——S. 115—Execution sale—Sale on subsequent mortgage—Prior mortgagees if bound to get their mortgages notified at the time of sale.

There is no duty on prior mortgagees to get their mortgage liens notified in a sale in execution and no estoppel can arise as against the auction-purchaser by reason of such non-notification. 36 C. 323, Dist. (Lindsay, J.C.) KIFAYAT ULLAH v. MAHABIR PRASAD. 24 I.C. 2=1 O.L.J. 175.

——S. 115—Execution sale — Purchase subject to mortgage.

An auction-purchaser of property subject to a prior mortgage is estopped from denying the validity of the mortgage on the ground of failure of consideration or undue influence; but, if he merely buys an estate which is under mortgage but does not take it subject to the encumbrance, he can impeach the validity of the mortgage. Where property is sold in accordance with a decree for sale the purchaser cannot raise a plea of priority in respect of a mortgage, not set up by the mortgagee in his suit for sale. (Lindsay, A.J.C.) RAMKUMAR v. DWARAKA PRASAD. 16 I C. 5=16 O.C. 211.

A judgment-debtor is not estopped from objecting to the validity of an execution sale on the ground that the property is a non-transferable occupancy holding merely because he consented to an order of attachment before judgment of the property. The attachment merely prevented an alienation and the judgment-debtor by consenting to it merely fettered his right to deal with the property. (Roe and Jwala Prasad, JJ.) ——S. 115—Fraud—Advantage from.

Estoppel and the above equitable rule are quite different. The former is no more than a rule of evidence, and its operation hardly extends to cases falling under the above equitable principle. ———S. 115—Minor—Contract—Estoppel.

A minor is not estopped from setting up his minority. As judicially interpreted the Contract Act makes contract entered into by a minor void and the Court should not be compelled to pronouce them valid by the provisions contained in the Evidence Act. It is not apparently the case that the word 'person' in the section does not include a minor or certified lunatic or other person under a disability to contract owing to imbecility of judgment. But it might be held that such a person could not be held to have intentionally caused anything. When the law of the contract declared that an infant would not be liable upon a contract or in the statute of fraud in connection with a contract, he cannot be made liable upon the same contract, by means of an estoppel; in other words there can be no doubt about the general law that the principle of estoppel which is provision of adjective law cannot be invoked to defeat the plain provision of a statute. Per Raymond, A.J.C.—There is no distinction in principle between a minor plaintiff and minor defendant and if in the case of a contract entered into by a minor the principle of estoppel is to be applied to him whether he is the plaintiff or defendant it would be tantamount to binding him by an agreement which the legislature has declared to be void and hence unenforceable. He cannot set up against the mortgagee the paramount title of a third party even though the latter might eventually prove a right to recover the property. If the Hindu public or anybody else is interested as proprietor of the mortgaged property or has a paramount title adverse to that of the mortgagor, the decision in the mortgage suit will not be binding upon such a person and it is competent to such person to take proper steps at the proper time to protect his interests. ———S. 115—None if truth known—Silence—Duty to speak—Negligent omission.

The acquiescence or estoppel which will deprive a man of legal rights must amount to fraud. A man is not to be deprived of his legal rights unless he has acted in such a way as would make it fraudulent for him to set up those rights. The element or the requisites necessary to constitute fraud of that description are these:—In the first place, the plaintiff must have made a mistake as to his legal rights. Secondly the plaintiff must have expended some money or must have done some act (not necessarily upon the defendant's land) on the faith of the mistaken belief. Thirdly the defendant, the possessor of the legal right, must know of the existence of his own right which is inconsistent with the right claimed by the plaintiff. If he does not know of it he is in the same position as the plaintiff and the doctrine of acquiescence is founded upon conduct with a knowledge of your legal rights. Fourthly, the defendant, the possessor of the legal right must know of the plaintiff's mistaken belief of his rights. If he does not, there is nothing which it calls upon him to assert his own rights. Lastly, the defendant, the possessor of the legal right, must have encouraged the plaintiff in his expenditure of money or in the other acts which he has done either directly or by abstaining from asserting his legal right. Where all these elements exist, there is fraud of such a nature as will entitle the Court to restrain the possessor of the legal right from exercising it but nothing short of this will do. Where the defendants as in the present case were under no mistake about their rights, they were perfectly aware that the land belonged to the plaintiff and they wrote a letter to the plaintiff asking for permission to construct an over bridge, there is no room for any estoppel. Subsequently the aunt wrote to the niece and to her husband assuring them that a village had been purchased only with a view to be given to the niece and that it would be duly given to her after the death of the writer. The niece and her husband thereupon came and lived with the aunt for seven years till her death. The niece claimed the village as hers, though there was no written and registered conveyance in writing in her favour, as required by law. Held, that having regard to the actions of the parties, neither the aunt nor her legal representatives could resile from the contract which was specifically enforceable by the niece. The niece was accordingly held entitled to the possession of the village. The conduct of the parties and their actings had supplied whatever defects there might have been from a conveyancing point of view and the parties were estopped from going.

Pleadings.

———S. 115—Pleading—Nature of—Scope of the doctrine.

Very often the term 'estoppel' is used with reference to transactions to which it has no proper application. ———S. 115—Pleading—Nature of plea.

Estoppel and res judicata are not the same. A true res judicata ousts the jurisdiction of the Court, while estoppel shuts the mouth of the party. Estoppel means that a person shall not be allowed to say one thing at one time and the opposite at another; while res judicata means that the person shall not say the same thing twice over. If a plaintiff wants to show that defendants are estopped from raising a certain plea by reason of their pleadings in a previous suit between the parties mere production of a copy of the Court's judgment in the previous suit containing a summary of the pleadings in that suit is not enough but the written statement filed by the defts. in that suit should be produced. ——S. 115—Representation— Change of position.

A change in the position by representations of a person is the basis of the doctrine of estoppel. Not only the persons making the representations but all holding under them gratuitously are bound by the estoppel. Upon the sale by auction in an estate it was purchased benami on behalf of the Zemindar of the estate, but no transfer to the benamidar was made. The benamidar, upon the instruction of the Zamindar, purported to transfer the village by a deed of sale to the Zemindar's illegitimate daughter, by whom however, no consideration was paid. The Zemindar by petition supported an application by the daughter for mutation of names, whereupon she became the registered proprietrix. Held, that the Zemindar and those claiming under him by gratuitous title were estopped from denying the title of the grantee because as a result of the Zemindar's acts her position had been changed in that she became liable for the revenue assessed upon the ——S. 115—Representation—Negligence—Collector—Defective performance of statutory duty—Estoppel against Government—Bombay City Land Revenue Act (II of 1876) Tenure of land.

The object of Bombay Act II of 1876 is to provide for the administration and collection of the land revenue of the Government in the City of Bombay and not to establish a system of registration of titles. The revenue register might be of use for conveyancing purposes. But neither the language of the statute nor the character of the officials who have the duty of keeping it, is such as to indicate an invitation to the public to rely on the incidental statements as to titles made in the records but which do not purport to be decisive either of the rights of the Government or those of the individuals as to anything except the liability to contribute to the revenue. A certificate of the Collector, under the provisions of the above Act, certifying an extract from the rent rolls kept in the office by which extract certain land was incorrectly described as being classified under the head 'Rent roll or quit or ground rent' does not estop the Government from resuming the land as being held under the sanadi tenure. ——S. 115 — Representation of fact—Misrepresentation—Contract executed under—Effect on heirs.

Misrepresentation per se as a ground of relief must be one of fact and not of future intention. So in cases of misrepresentation of fact, the relation of the parties in law would have to be determined on the assumption that the fact was as it was represented to be. Thus where a marriage was brought about by a misrepresentation of a person that the bridegroom was his adopted son, the former is bound to make good the misrepresentation and so the adopted will be entitled to succeed as heir after his death in preference to his widow. ——S. 115—Representation—Negligence.

(Scott, C.J.)—An action cannot be founded on estoppel, as it is merely a rule of evidence, but it is important to prevent the defendant from denying the truth of what has been asserted by him. A person cannot take advantage of a representation alleged to create estoppel unless he is concerned in the transaction in which the representation was made. (Russel, J.) There can be no estoppel when the whole record or deed in which the statement relied upon is contained shows the truth. There is no estoppel when the circumstances were likely to have prevented a reasonable man from acting on the statement. (Scott, C.J. and Russel, J.) Estoppel and waiver are questions of conduct and we must necessarily determine them on the facts of each case. If each of the parties has by his acts intentionally caused the other to believe that the payment was a regular satisfaction of the obligation and the parties have acted on that belief, neither can afterwards deny the regularity. There is no distinction as to the law of waiver and estoppel between bonds and decrees, in regard to rights which are at the option of the creditor. When the creditor can on default of payment of interest by instalments, call up or abstain from calling up the principal debt, then for deciding whether or not waiver or estoppel has suspended or destroyed that option, it is immaterial whether the transaction vests on an instalment bond or an instalment decree. It is a fundamental proposition of law that waiver cannot be proved by payment and acceptance of overdue instalments alone. If a creditor's right to demand the whole debt depends on two consecutive instalments, and the first default is condoned by waiver, the occurrence of any succeeding default will not revive it. No conditional waiver of the first default can take place without express agreement. (Batten and Stanyon, A.J.Cs.) BALLABHDAS v. DALIP-SINGH. 12 I.C. 741=7 N L R. 147.

———Ss. 115 and 91 to 94—Estoppel—Scope of the sections.

Section 115 of the Evidence Act may no doubt override sections 91 to 94 because the law of estoppel is one which must prevail against a rule of procedure only. If a person has by the act permitted the other party to believe that the agreement was other than that embodied in the document and has caused him to act upon that belief he cannot fall back upon the provisions of section 92 and thereby escape from the consequences of his own actions. But this is a different thing from holding that when such conduct does not amount to an estoppel it may be proved in evidence or in order to show that the intention of the parties was something other than that expressed by them in the written document. If the written document is perfectly clear in its terms and applies to existing facts, evidence to show that it was not meant to apply to such facts is distinctly excluded by section 94 of the Evidence Act. After the death of A's widow, A's reversionary heir D obtained possession of the property colluding either with B or his tenants. C sued for foreclosure on the mortgage. D resisted that he, as reversionary heir of A was entitled to the property free from the mortgage. Held that (1) B as mortgagor was estopped from denying the mortgagee's title and as D got into possession with the help of B, the rule of estoppel applied to B, extended to D. ———S. 116—When tenant can deny—At the beginning of the tenancy.

The words in S. 116 "at the beginning of the tenancy" only apply to cases in which tenants are put into possession of tenancy by the person to whom they have attorned and not to cases in which the tenants have previously been in possession. Where there was no proof of any rent ever having been paid or that the defendant was inducted as a tenant by the plaintiff and the parties were brothers and admittedly the house was once joint property Held in these circumstances the defendant was not estopped from denying that he was the plaintiff's tenant. (Campell, J.) RISHI KESH v. MELA RAM. 1923 Lah. 493.

———S. 116—When tenant can deny—Duty to surrender possession.

A tenant in possession cannot, even after the expiration of his lease deny his landlord's title without actually and openly surrendering possession to him. Once the relationship of landlord and tenant is established the tenant must surrender possession before he can set up a claim to be the real owner. 123 P.R. 1919, Foll. (Broadway, J.) A tenant in possession cannot even after the tenancy period is over, deny the landlord's title, without actually and openly surrendering possession to him 24 C.L.J. 103; 38 A. 226; 78 A. 557 P.C., Foll. A tenant by whom a lease has been executed but who is not in possession is estopped from denying the landlord's title, in the absence of proof that he executed the lease in ignorance of his lessor's title or by fraud or misrepresentation or coercion. ———S 116—When tenant can deny—Nature of estoppel—'At the beginning of tenancy,' Contract Act, Ss. 13 and 20.

Lessee though not let into possession by lessor, cannot dispute his title unless he can show that he was ignorant of his lessor's defective title or he was granted lease by fraud, coercion, etc. (Abdur Rahim, O.C.J.) It is open to a tenant to deny the title of landlord's predecessor in title. The estoppel is absolute. 'At the beginning of the tenancy' refers to the beginning of occupation of land by tenant or his predecessor in title. (Seshagiri, Aiyar, J.) The contract of tenancy may be avoided if it is subject to defects mentioned in Ss 13 and 20. Contract Act. (Abdur Rahim, O C J. and Seshagiri Aiyar, J.) VENKATA CHETTY v. Where the husband in divorce proceedings relied on the birth of a child as evidence of adultery, under Ss. 118 and 120, Evidence Act, his evidence as to non-access was admissible. ——S. 118—Examination of witness of tender years—Procedure.

It is of very great importance that when the evidence of a child of tender years is adduced, the Judicial Officer should, for the sake of precaution, ascertain as a preliminary measure, by means of a few simple questions, whether the intelligence of the child is such that (whether sworn or not) it is capable of giving testimony which is patent of credit; and it is desirable that something should, at the commencement of the record of the evidence of the witness of this character be entered to show that such a test has been in a fact made. It may turn out in the course of the examination at the trial that the test has been a fallacious one and that the evidence which the child gives is not intelligible and in such a case, it is always open to the Judicial Officer to say that he cannot accept the evidence which the child is giving. On the other hand there is no obligation imposed by law upon a Judge definitely to make on the record any endorsement of his own as to a child's capacity, and when he has clearly relied upon the evidence given, it is idle to suggest that he could have been other than thoroughly satisfied as to the capacity of the child to give intelligible testimony. Per Mookerjee, J.—There is no inflexible rule that if a party, plaintiff or defendant, gives his testimony, he must be disbelieved, because he is a party to the suit; such a rule, if adopted, would nullify the provisions of S. 120 of the Indian Evidence Act, which provides that in all civil proceedings the parties to the suit shall be competent witnesses. When a plaintiff has deposed in support of his case, his testimony must be scrutinised in the same manner as that of any other witness; and the Court is free to attach to the evidence that amount of weight which it appears to deserve, from his demeanour, deportment under cross-examination motives to speak or hide the truth, means of knowledge, powers of memory and other tests by which the value of a statement of a witness can be ascertained if not with absolute certainty, yet with such a reasonable amount of conviction as ought to justify a man of ordinary prudence in acting upon those statements. Under English law, even the documents passing from hand to hand in a public office without any special mark of secrecy are entitled to the privilege legally recognised as to the production of public documents, the ground of privilege being that it would be detrimental to the public interest to produce it. The words 'communications in official confidence' in S. 124 import no special degree of secrecy and no pledge for its maintenance but include all matters communicated by one officer to another in the performance of duties. Where therefore the document sought to be put in, was a report by one officer to another and it was objected to, as being detrimental to public interest if produced, it is sufficient ground for the Court to refuse to compel the production thereof. The officer in charge of the record is the sole judge of the character of the document and his assertion in respect thereof, binds the Court. Case Law discussed. 32 M. 62, Dist.; 18 B. 263. Foll. Where the only evidence against an accused person is that he has produced stolen property out of a place which is not in his own possession, that evidence is not sufficient to support a conviction for theft or for receiving stolen property. But the production of the property is clear evidence against the person producing it and is material corroboration of the evidence of an accomplice who has deposed that that person joined him in committing a dacoity or a burglary or a theft. The discovery of stolen property out of a house jointly occupied by himself and his uncle, is corroboration of the approver's story against the accused. Such production might not be sufficient evidence of itself to support a conviction for being dishonestly in possession of stolen property but it certainly is evidence against the persons producing it. The possession of the three tickets all from Chakala to Mandra and bearing consecutive numbers was strong corroboration of the approver's story as to the appellants having accompanied him to the scene of the occurrence. Held, the guilt of the appellants had been established beyond reasonable doubt by the evidence of the approver which had been amply corroborated as against them. ———S. 133—Value of accomplice's evidence.

An accomplice is a suspect witness whose evidence must be received with great caution. While it is essential that accused persons should be protected from conviction based on the mere evidence of an untrustworthy accomplice, it is important that the requirements of the Legislature in this respect should not be exaggerated by the Court as to offer a practical guarantee of immunity to persons guilty of grave offences which are in their very nature difficult of detection. EVIDENCE ACT (I of 1872), S. 133—Value of accomplice's evidence.

——S 133—Value of accomplice's evidence—Corroboration—Practice.

Under S. 133, Evidence Act, the evidence of an accomplice by itself is enough for a conviction, but it is a rule of practice founded on experience that in every case where an accomplice has given evidence, the Court must raise a presumption that he is unworthy of credit unless corroborated in material particulars. Failure to raise this presumption is an error of law, but in each case the weight to be attached must depend on the particular circumstances. (Mullick and Thornhill, JJ.) MADAN GURU v. EMPEROR. 73 I.C. 968=24 Cr. L J. 723= 4 Pat. L T. 381.

Value of Approver's Evidence.

——S. 133—Value of approver's evidence.

The evidence of an approver, if believed, is sufficient foundation whereon to repose a conviction, but in practice, the Court ex majori cautela insists upon corroboration of the approvers' statements in material particulars. (Le-Rossignol, J.) TOTA SINGH v. EMPEROR. 69 I.C. 462=23 Cr. L J 735.

——S. 133—Value of approver's evidence—What is corroboration.

An approver may be telling the truth and it is quite probable that he himself had a hand in the murder but his statement as to who his accomplices were must be corroborated by reliable evidence before it can form the basis of a conviction. The corroboration offered in this case was the statement of two men who apparently knew something about the matter from the very beginning but refused to make any statement until the third day of the police investigation. The delay may be due to their reluctance to implicate the accused after they had promised not to give information, but it was obvious that statements obtained after such a long delay must be regarded with suspicion; and these witnesses may possibly be scheming themselves at the expense of innocent men. Even if these witnesses bear no enmity to the appellants and are related to them, the long delay in making their statements makes their evidence liable to grave suspicion. If the plaintiff's case was that she did not inherit the property of her husband by reason of her unchastiity during his lifetime, then the question would be relevant. Counsel are not justified in making serious charges of fraud and crime unless they are personally satisfied of the existence of reasonable grounds for putting them forward. It is not sufficient to plead instructions. A Court can ask counsel as to whether they make a charge in cross-examination on instructions and if so to disclose them to the Court. ——S. 151—Indecent or scandalous question—Latitude to counsel.

The mere fact that at the trial before the Sessions Judge a prosecution witness tells a different story from that recorded by the Police after the occurrence does not necessarily make the witness a hostile witness. 13 C. 53; 24 C.W.N. 860, referred to. ——S. 154—Hostile witness, who is.

An unfavourable witness is not necessarily hostile. A hostile witness is one who from his manner, shows he is not inclined to tell the truth to the Court. A party, called by his opponent, cannot as of right be treated as hostile the matter being in the discretion of the Court. (Mookerjee and Buckland, JJ.) LUCHIRAM v. RADHA CHARAN. 66 I.C. 15 = 34 C.L J. 107.

——S. 154—Hostile witness—Who is—Commissioner cannot exercise discretion of Court

A witness is considered adverse where in the opinion of the Judge he bears a hostile animus to the party calling him and not merely when his testimony contradicts his proof When a witness is treated as hostile, cross-examination must be done to discredit the witness altogether and not merely to get rid of part of his testimony. There is in this respect no distinction on principle between an attesting witness whom a party is obliged to call and any other witness whom he may cite of his own choice but the Court may be easily persuaded in the former than in the latter case. In an examination of witnesses on commission, the Commissioner cannot exercise the discretion vested in Court under S 154 of the Act. (Mookerjee, J.C. and Fletcher, J.) It is not open to the prosecution in a criminal trial to cross-examine their own witness unless the Court declares him to be a hostile witness, unless this is done the answer to questions would not be admissible in evidence and the Court should not allow such questions. The investigating police officer when in the witness-box was asked about a certain date and the names of certain persons and the Court directed him to give the date and the names from the Police diary. Statements of witnesses made to the Police should not be used to corroborate them except in very special circumstances. The evidence of a witness hostile to the Crown may be impeached by reference to the Police diary.

——S. 155—Statement to Police—Person whether bound to state truth to Police.

Section 162, Cr. P. Code, allows the credit of a witness to be impeached, by a statement which he is alleged to have made to the Police in the course of an investigation under Chapter XIV of the Code though no person is bound to state the truth to the Police in the course of the above investigation. The statement to the Police is not evidence like a statement made on oath before a competent authority. (Maung Kin, J.) NGA PYE v. EMPEROR. 41 I.C. 668 = 18 Cr. L.J. 845.

——S. 155 (3)—Contradictory statements by witness—Previous depositions how far can be admitted to impeach his credit.

Where a previous deposition of a witness is relied on to impeach his credit under S. 155 (3), the contradictory statements alone can be admitted in evidence. (Mookerjee and Carnduff, JJ.) IMAMBANDI v. MATASUDDI. 13 I.C. 678 = 15 C.L.J. 621.

——S. 159—Witness—Duty of—Refreshing memory.

A witness before a Court of justice is under an obligation to tell the truth of the whole truth to the very best of his power. If upon any question he suffers from a bona fide lapse of memory of that failure of memory can be remedied by reference to any memorandum or other writing prepared by the witness at the time of the Court invites the witness to refresh his memory, with reference to the writing, the witness is under an obvious obligation to do so. The degree of conviction postulated by S. 160 cannot be treated as equivalent to any, on which the witness may choose to say that he is sure, whether or not it is too fantastic or illegal to commend itself to reasonable men. But the act of sending for document under those provisions does not ipso facto make the document evidence in the case. If relevant evidence as a guide to such evidence is found therein, proceedings must be taken, if such evidence is admissible at that stage to have it brought into the trial according to the provisions of law. The rule of audi alteram partem is one of elementary justice and accords with common sense. The duty of a judicial officer is to ascertain judicially which way the truth lies and not which party has made the better fight. (Stanyon, A.J.C.) PUNJA v. BHADU. 18 I.C. 857 = 9 N.L.R. 11.

The term 'business' in S. 2 has the same meaning which it has in the Income-tax Act. The Act does not extend that meaning nor introduces anything which, according to the scheme of the Income-tax Act, is wholly dissimilar. A person who has invested his capital in house property and kept a rent office and a staff of rent collectors, clerks, etc., for the purpose of letting out his house and collecting rents. Held, he was not carrying on a business within the Excess Profits Duty Act. A company which holds house property and distributes the rents in the form of dividends to shareholders is not carrying on business within that Act and although it is an association for acquiring gain, yet the method is passive by owning property and not by the active carrying on of business. EXCESS PROFITS DUTY ACT (X of 1919), S. 18.

———S. 18—Proceedings for the recovery of duty—Limitation Rules framed under the Act—Rule 24.

Rule 24 (1) describes how the Excess Profits duty is to be recovered when default has been made in payment. This is the only rule dealing with mode of recovery, and the subject of the rule is entered as "mode and time of recovery." Also rules 23 and 24 of the rules made by the Govt. under S. 18 (1) and (2) of the Excess Profits Duty Act are classed under the heading "recovery of duty" whilst rule 13, which is the rule providing for a notice of demand being served on the person assessed, is put under the heading "demand". From this it is evident that the demand made on the assessee is treated in the rules as something quite distinct from the recovery of the duty, the proceedings for which begin when default has been made. The same distinction is made in the Income Tax Acts, VII of 1918 and XI of 1922, where the notice of demand is provided for in a chapter the subject of which is "Deductions and Assessment," whilst there is a separate chapter dealing with the subject of the recovery of the tax. The words in sub-rule (3) of the rule 24 "proceedings for the recovery of any sums" mean the proceedings taken under sub-rule (1) of that rule after default has been made in the payment. EXECUTION—Application.

Application.

———Application—Dismissed for default—Restoration.

Where an application for cancellation of sale in favour of the applicant and recovery of the property on the allegation that the property did not belong to the judgment-debtor, was dismissed for default, the decree-holder cannot apply for the restoration of the same and the Execution Court has no power to entertain such an application. (Rafique, J.) BHIKAM KHAN v. DAN SINGH. 1923 All. 544.

———Application—Striking off—Effect.

When a case is in appeal and in the meanwhile the execution proceedings are struck off, the execution proceedings and consequent attachment remain effective; so the transfer of the attached property during the pendency of the appeal is void. When once an objection is overruled it is not open to the party to raise the same over again in appeal and the decree-holder is entitled to execute his decree. (Tudball and Sulaiman, JJ.) DAOOD ALI SHAH v. HAYAT ALI SHAH.

———Application—Revival—Limitation.

A decree for demolition of a house was made on 31st July, 1907. An application for execution was made on 15th February, 1909. On the 26th May, 1909, the judgment-debtor took two weeks' time to demolish the building and the application was struck off the file as the decree-holder consented. On the 21st July, 1913, another application was put in; Held, that this application was to revive the former application and execution was not barred. (Bannerjee, J.) GANGA PRASAD v JWALA PRASAD. 26 I.C. 815.

———Application—Continuation of—First application for arrest—Second application for attachment.

Where a first application for execution was for arrest of the judgment-debtor and the second application was for attachment of his property, the second is not one in continuation of the first application. (Tudball J.) MEVA LAL v. AHMADALI. 13 I.C. 929=9 A.L.J. 17.

———Application—Law applicable—Decree passed under one act—Execution when the Act is repealed by another Act is governed by the latter Act.

A suit terminates with the decree and consequently when after the passing of the decree, the Act under which it was passed is replaced by another Act, the application for execution must be governed by the latter Act, for though it is an application in the suit it is a separate proceeding. Attachment.

———Attachment—Money due from Railway Company—Under transmission through Post Office—Post Office, agent of the judgment-debtor.

An attachment of the money due to the judgment-debtor from the Provident Fund of a Railway Company while in the hands of the Post Office in the form of a Money Order sent by the Fund at the request of the judgment-debtor is good as the Post Office was the agent of the judgment-debtor and not of the Railway Company. (Tudball, J.) PARMER v. CAWASJEE. 33 I.C. 723=14 A.L.J. 236.

———Attachment—Dismissal of application—Attachment, if subsists after.

When the property is once attached in execution of a decree the attachment subsists even when the execution application is dismissed unless the order of dismissal amounts to a declaration that the decree is incapable of execution and unless the order raises the attachment. ———Attachment — Effect of — Whether creates charge or confers title.

An attachment in execution is only meant to prevent private alienation and does not create any charge in favour of decree-holder. Where one property is attached under two money-decrees, and brought to sale under the latter attachment, the sale is not affected by the prior attachment in the other suit and the attaching creditor's right to redeem the mortgage, if any, on the attached property, comes to an end. The auction-purchaser purchasing property under attachment takes it free from attachment and he gets unrestricted rights of alienation, and acquires any equity or right to redeem which the judgment-debtor may have had. ———Attachment—Devisee's interest— Probate taken by Administrator-General—Latter not made party to execution—Effect of.

In execution of a personal decree against a father, the son's share in the property was attached and the Administrator-General who had taken probate of the father's will was not made a party to the execution : Held, that the son's share could not be sold because the bequest in favour of the son becomes a vested interest in the legatee from the date of the father's death though the son may be entitled to receive it only in due course of administration. Construction of Decree.

———Construction of decree.

The Executing Court cannot be asked to interpret, the decree which is on the face of it clear and unambiguous, in the light of the pleadings or the record so as to give it a meaning inconsistent with its unambiguous terms. Decree inding.

———Decree binding—Validity—Not to be questioned.

It is true that an Executing Court cannot go behind the decree and must execute it as it finds it, and it is also true that ordinarily it is open to the mortgagee decree-holder, to recover the whole of the money from any part of the mortgaged property; but if the vesting of part of the equity of redemption in the mortgage debt is tantamount to discharge or satisfaction of the proportionate part of the mortgage debt there is no reason why an Executing Court should not recognise it and go into the extent to which the decree has been satisfied. ———Decree binding—Objection to legality of—Lunatic—Not properly represented.

Any order and judgment though erroneous, is good until discharged or declared inoperative. The Executing Court cannot go into the validity or propriety of the decree. A proceeding to enforce a judgment is collateral to the judgment itself and therefore no enquiry into its irregularity or validity can be made in such a proceeding. A judgment against a person who was a lunatic at the time of trial, and yet was not represented by a legal guardian, is not to be impeached in execution but should be reversed or annulled in some special suit taken for that purpose. 31 A. 573, Ref. ———Duty of Court—Not to alter or amend decree but to execute it as it stands.

It is the duty of an executing Court to look in the first instance at the decree and if the terms of the decree are clear and unambiguous, an executing Court is bound to give effect to it, even though it may regard it as erroneous. (Leslie Jones and Broadway, JJ.) KAKA SINGH v. LACHMAN DAS. 67 I.C. 740 = 3 L.L.J. 263.

———Duty of Court—Decree to be executed as it stands.

It is the duty of the executing Court to execute the decree as it stands and it is open to the Court to direct something to be done not directed by the decree on the ground that literal compliance with the decree was impossible. An executing Court has no right to direct a decree-holder build a bund at any point other than that provided by the decree. (Scott-Smith, J.) ALI MAHOMED v. JAHAH KHAN. 65 I.C. 126.

EXECUTION—Ex parte order.

———Duty of Court—Person not party to decree, if can object.

The executing Court's only duty is to execute the decree according to its terms and it is not for that Court to say that the decree is not binding on the property, in the absence of certain parties, nor can the Court entertain any objection to the execution by a person who is not a party to the decree. (Abdul Rahim and Sadasiva Aiyar, JJ.) GUNUPATTI NARASA REDDI v. MAKKENA KONDAP NAIDU. 61 I.C. 759 = 13 L.W. 143.

———Duty of Court—Plea of payment to transferee decree-holder.

The District Judge should have allowed the judgment-debtor to prove that the payments certified were made to a person entitled to execute the decree and should have decided whether the transfer really conveyed to the transferee the interests of the transferor. (Miller and Sadasiva Aiyar, JJ.) BALKRISHNA PILLAI v. V. MINI REDDI. 14 I.C. 702.

———Duty of Court—Equities as between judgment-debtors.

The Court executing the decree has nothing whatever to do with the equities arising in the case between the judgment-debtors. (Piggott, J.) MAZAHAR ALI KHAN v. HUSSAINI JAN. 18 I.C. 312.

Equitable Execution.

———Equitable execution—Receiver.

A mortgagee of a factory obtained a mortgage decree and the factory was about to be sold in execution, when the judgment-debtor applied for the appointment of a Receiver on the ground, that the sale of factory would ruin him. The Court with the consent of the decree-holder appointed a Receiver who was to work the factory. The appointment of a Receiver did not operate by way of equitable execution but was rather a partial and somewhat irregular 'execution' of the mortgage decree by consent of parties. EXECUTION—Jurisdiction.

———Jurisdiction—Concurrent execution—Legality of—Execution in several Courts.

Both under the Civil Procedure Code of 1908 and the previous C.P. Code the legality of the concurrent execution has been recognised though in practice it is not generally carried out. On principle there is no difference between a concurrent execution after transfer in another Court and a concurrent execution in the Court in which the decree was passed. That the present C.P. Code does not view with disfavour concurrent executions is among other sections indicated by S. 46. Further separate and successive applications for execution giving reliefs of different character may always be made. 8 Cal. 687; 1 C.L.J. 315; 97 M. 232; 18 C. 515; 19 A. 98 referred to. Right to.

———Right to—Re-sale—Separate mortgage-bonds—Decree—Sale—Properties sold together—Re-sale before possession necessary.

The whole matter arose out of a decree on three mortgage-bonds, where sale of all properties together had already taken place: the High Court held, on an objection by one of the transferees of the judgment-debtor, that one sale was objectionable and that each property separately mortgaged ought to have been separately sold. The decree-holder who was also auction-purchaser applied as auction-purchaser and absolute owner for possession ignoring the direction of the High Court. Held, that the decree-holder who was held up in his proceedings ought to be allowed to persue his alternative remedy in accordance with the judgment of the High Court, or, in other words, to apply alternatively, by way of amendment of his application. for an order for re-sale of the properties separately in accordance with the High Court direction. ———Right to—Maintenance decree—Charge on immoveable properties—Suit if necessary after exhausting hypotheca.

A decree for arrears of maintenance and for future maintenance was passed and the decree-holder after the hypotheca was exhausted, proceeded against other properties belonging to her deceased husband in execution. Held, she was entitled to do so, without the necessity of having recourse to a suit, as the decree was not a mortgage-decree. The charge created was merely a lien not antecedent to the decree but created by it and it cannot be said there was a mortgage on the property. A executed a mortgage to B in 1898. C obtained a decree against A, in execution of which he attached the equity of redemption of A in 1907 and purchased it in 1911. After the attachment, and before 1911, B brought a suit on his mortgage of 1898 and obtained a compromise decree. C sued to redeem the mortgage. Held, that C was liable to pay the full amount specified in the compromise decree and not merely the amount of the original mortgage in favour of B. An attachment of property does not confer any interest in it. It merely operates to keep the property in the custody of the law until such time as a sale can be had to satisfy the decree in pursuance of which the attachment was issued. A brought to sale and purchased B's one-sixth share by paying the money to be paid by B to others into Court and obtained possession. C sued for declaration of the right and that A was not entitled to possession by virtue of his purchase. Held, that A was not entitled to separate possession of any specific portion of the house by virtue only of his purchase at the execution sale as what passed to him was only the right, title and interest of B in an undivided one-sixth share. ———Rights of purchaser—Sale subject to incumbrance.

On the sale of the property subject to encumbrances the vendor gets the price of his interest, whatever it may be, whether the price settled by private bargain or determined by public competition together with an indemnity against the encumbrances affecting the land. The contract of indemnity may be express or implied. If the purchaser covenants with the vendor to pay the encumbrances it is still nothing more than a contract of indemnity. The purchaser takes the property subject to burden attached to it. If the encumbrances turn out to be invalid, the vendor has nothing to complain of. He has got what he bargained for. His indemnity is complete. He cannot pick up the burthen of which the land is relieved and seize it as is own property. The notion that after the completion of the sale, the purchaser is in some way a trustee for the vendor of the amount by which the existence or supposed existence of encumbrances, had led to a diminution of the price and liable, therefore, to account to the vendor for anything that remains of that amount after the encumbrances are satisfied or disposed of, is without foundation. After the purchase is completed the judgment-debtor has no claim to participate in any benefit which the purchaser may derive from his purchase by reason of the incumbrance being less onerous than it was stated to be. ———Setting aside—Grounds — Omission to comply with statute—Irregular decree—Objection to sale—Suit to set aside sale—C.P. Code, S. 47—Bar.

In a mortgage suit for sale the decree did not comply with the provisons of S. 88 of the T.P. Act as no day was fixed by Court on which payment might be made within six months from the date of declaring in Court the amount due. In execution of the decree the mortgaged properties were attached, sold and purchased with the permission of the Court by the mortgage decree-holder. The sale was duly confirmed. The sons of the mortgagor who had been parties to the suit and the execution proceedings under the decree brought the present suits to redeem the mortgage. Held, that the decree was intended to be made in compliance with the Act, and, whether or not its provisions were complied with, the property and all the right, title and interest of the defendant were in fact sold in execution of a decree of Court which had jurisdiction to entertain a suit in which the decree was made and that the mortgagor (plaintiff) lost all right to redeem. The question now raised could have been raised before the sale was confirmed and if so raised, would have been determined by the Court executing the decree, and the present

A sale in execution of a decree passed by a Court with jurisdiction does not become a nullity merely because the Court in passing the decree exercised its jurisdiction wrongly. ——Setting aside—Nullity and irregularity—Distinction—Test.

It cannot be maintained on principle that because a sale has been held in contravention of a statutory provision, it must necessarily be null and void. An irregularity is a deviation from a rule of law which does not take away the foundation or authority for the proceeding; whereas a nullity is a proceeding that is taken without any foundation or is so essentially defective as to be of no avail or effect. One test is to see if the party can waive the objection. If he can, it is an irregularity; if not, a nullity. A provision based on grounds of public policy cannot be waived; but if it is for the benefit of the individual he can. (Mookerjee and Chotzner, JJ.) ——Setting aside—Fraud—Plea of purchaser without notice—When a bar to application.

If a decree is obtained by fraud, the execution sale can be set aside if the facts of the cases show that the person agreed has the balance of equity in his favour as against the decree-holder and purchaser. ——Setting aside—Inherent power—Abuse of the process of Court—Suppression of facts—Leave to bid—Matters to be considered in granting leave.

The Court has inherent power to refuse to confirm an execution sale if it is satisfied that it it was misled either in giving leave to bid or in fixing the real price. The Court will not however exercise the inherent power unless it has had all the facts fully before it and is satisfied that it has been misled. In order to show that the Court has been misled, it is necessary to show either actual misstatements to the Court or non-disclosure to the Court of relevant facts unknown to the Court and which there was a duty to bring before the Court. 23 Mad. 217, followed. On an application for leave to bid the main question for the Court to consider is whether it is to the advantage of every one concerned in order to obtain the highest price that the plaintiff should be allowed to bid or not. In this case their Lordships set aside an execution sale by reason of the deliberate suppression by the decree-holder in his affidavit before the Registrar on the Original Side of the facts that the properties were put to auction before and that the Court had fixed a very much higher reserve price and that a bid for a much larger amount was not accepted. ———Setting aside—Parties.

A purchaser at a sale held in execution of a decree which he subsequently sought to be amended is a necessary party to the application for its amendment on the general principle that persons, whom it is desired to bind by proceedings can and must be impleaded in them and the order allowing the amendment is not binding on him, if they are not so impleaded. EXECUTION SALE—Setting aside.

———Setting aside—Grounds for—Impeaching collaterally.

The mere fact that the Court ordering the sale had notice of an attachment by the superior Court does not oust the jurisdiction of the former Court and the sale cannot be treated as a nullity. A sale in contravention of S. 63 (1), C.P.C., is not null and void but merely irregular. The title of a purchaser at a judicial sale, not himself in fault, cannot be impaired at law or in equity by showing any mere error or irregularity in the proceedings. Errors and irregularities must be corrected by a direct proceeding. If not so corrected, they cannot be made available by way of collateral attack on the purchaser's title. There cannot be a collateral impeachment of a judicial sale and a direct impeachment is possible only to the parties to the proceedings or those interested therein. 4 A. 359, Not Foll.; 18 B. 458; 22 M. 295, Foll. EXECUTION SALE—Setting aside.

———Setting aside — Order of refusal—Appeal.

An order refusing to set aside a sale or to allow restitution can be appealed against as a decree. (Piggott, J.C. and Kanhaiya Lal, A.J.C.) NAWAB NUZHAT-UD-DAULA ABBAS HUSAIN KHAN v. NAWAB DILBAND BEGAM.
21 I.C. 570 = 16 O.C. 225.

———Setting aside—Grounds— Sanction—Absence of.

After every attachment of a share in a mauza, a fresh sanction should be obtained from Government to the sale of the property attached. Where a certain share in a mauza was attached but a larger share was put up to sale and sold. It was held that the sale was invalid and hence it cannot be upheld even to the extent of the share actually attached. (Lindsay, J.C.) GAYA PRASAD SINGH v. MISRA SINGH. 15 I.C. 780 = 16 O.C. 81.

———Setting aside—Sanction of Government for sale of ancestral property given after sale, if sufficient.

Sanction of Government for the sale of ancestral property, given after the sale is not sufficient to validate the same. (Chamier, J.C.) MUHAMMAD AHMED v. PRAG NARAIN
11 I.C. 346 = 14 O.C. 115.

———Setting aside—Sale within 30 days of proclamation is not void.

A sale held within 30 days of the proclamation is not void but such an order is only a material irregularity. (Miller and Mullick, JJ.) WAZIR NARAYAN v. BHIKHARI RAM.
(1922 Pat. 321 = 3 Pat. L T. 691 = 4 U.P.L.R.(Pat.) 100 = 1923 P. 45.

———Setting aside—Sale in defiance of injunction—Effect of.

The District Court in execution of a decree fixed a date for the sale of certain properties Before that date the claimant instituted a suit in the Sub-Court and obtained an injunction restraining the decree-holder from selling the property. The District Court refused to stay the sale whereupon the sale was held and the purchase-money paid into Court On an application to set aside the sale, held by the High Court that though the District Court was not personally bound by the order of injunction, yet it should in the exercise of its inherent power have directed stay of the sale having regard to the fact that the decree-holder was restrained by injunction from executing the decree. In the result the sale was set aside and the money deposited in Court was refunded to the purchaser. (Miller, C J. and Mullick, J.) MAHARAJ BAHADUR SINGH v. A. H. FORBES. (1922 Pat. 226 = 3 P.L.T. 645 = 1 P 682 = 1923 P. 382.

———Setting aside—Fraud.

Though a decree is fraudulently obtained, the execution sale under it is not rendered void, unless the auction-purchaser was a party to the fraud in the execution proceedings which vitiated the sale. (Jwala Prasad, J.) JAGAB-NATH PRASAD v. BAHUBANI. 62 I.C. 594.

EXECUTION SALE—Territorial Jurisdiction.

Stranger Purchaser.

———Stranger purchaser—Decree-holders.

The Court has a tender regard for honest purchasers at sales held in execution of its decrees though the sales may be afterwards set aside, where those purchasers are not parties to the suit and the decree has not been passed without jurisdiction. But the mere measure of protection is not extended to purchasers who are themselves the decree-holders nor to the purchasers from those decree-holders-purchasers. (Jenkins, C.J. and Chatterjee, JJ.) SATIS CHANDRA GHOSE v. RAMESWRI DASI.
22 C L.J. 409 = 31 I.C. 894 = 20 C.W.N. 665.

———Stranger purchaser—Irregularities in sale—Effect on auction purchaser.

A bona fide auction-purchaser need look, only to the decree and order of sale of the executing court and is not bound to inquire further into title. So long as the decree remains valid, the proceedings taken under that decree, so far as they affect third parties in the same position as a bona fide auction-purchaser, cannot be impugned. 29 B. 435, 436; 10 A. 166 (P C.) Rel. (Le Rossignol and Campbell, JJ.) INDAR SAIN v. PRABHU LAL. 3 Lah. 86 = 1922 Lah. 277.

———Stranger purchaser—Decree—Reversal of—Effect of sale.

A bona fide purchaser who is not the decree-holder, or any person claiming through him, at an auction sale in execution of a valid decree acquires a valid title to the property purchased by him and is not affected by the subsequent reversal or modification of the decree. 14 C. 18: 10 A. 166; 26 C. 794; 37 C. 107 Foll. (Broadway and Martineau, JJ.) TARA CHAND v. ABDUL AHAD. 67 I.C 894.

Territorial Jurisdiction.

———Territorial jurisdiction—Want of.

Sale held by Court without territorial jurisdiction is void. Objection to defect of jurisdiction must be taken at the earliest opportunity in the Court of first instance. (Mookerjee and Chotzner, JJ.) MOHAN CHAKRAVARTY v. MANINDRA CHANDRA ROY CHOUDHRY.
27 C.W.N. 842 = 1923 C. 619.

———Territorial jurisdiction—Agency court if can sell property outside.

A court has no jurisdiction in execution of a decree to sell property over which it had no territorial jurisdiction at the time it passed the order of sale. Thus an Agency Court has no right to sell the right to collect kattubadi in villages situated beyond the limits of its territorial jurisdiction. (Spencer and Devadoss, JJ.) MAHARAJAH OF JEYPORE v. RAJAH LAKSHMINARASIMMA GARU.
18 L.W 761 = 1923 M. 145.

EXECUTION SALE—Territorial Jurisdiction.

———Territorial jurisdiction.

Where properties are transferred by Government notification from the territorial jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree it has no jurisdiction thereafter to attach or sell the property. If, however, the sale is held in execution and confirmed, the judgment-debtor might be estopped if he sued to recover possession. The auction-purchaser however is not estopped from doing so. (1883) 13 Q B.D. 457, Foll.; 22 Cal. 909 Expl.; 35 Cal. 877 and 7 C.L.J. 644, Not Foll. Whatever may be the general position of an execution creditor in regard to cases over which a Court has jurisdiction, the principle of estoppel should not be extended to cases where the judgment-debtor is sought to be affected by a rule of procedure relating to jurisdiction. ———What passes under—Attachment and sale of property of stranger.

Attachment and sale of defendant's property for decree against plaintiff is illegal and void and the sale is without jurisdiction. The purchaser gets no title. (Lord Macnaghten, J.) ———What passes under—Appurtenances—Sale of sixteen annas Zemindari—Groves.

Where in execution of a mortgage decree the entire 16 annas zemindari with all appurtenances were sold and purchased by the plaintiff the sale is not exclusive of the shares in the groves. (Richards, C.J. and Tudball, J.) HASAN ALI KHAN v. AZHA-RUL HUSAN. 41 All. 45 = 48 I.C. 367 = 16 A.L.J. 900.

———What passes under—Sale of Zamindari rights—Buildings appurtenant to Zemindari.

Where an inventory filed with the application for execution of a decree specified the Zamindari to be sold, but not the buildings situate therein the sale passed the Zamindari only and not the buildings. 4 A. 381, 22 A. 168; Dist. EXECUTION SALE—What passes under.

———What passes under—Joint Hindu family—Decree against father—Son's interest when passes.

In the absence of any objection by any member of the family when joint family property is put up for sale in execution of a decree against a manager it may be inferred that the intention was to pass the interest of all the members of the family in the property, though it may be open to other members of the family to dispute that intention and to satisfy the Court either that the alienation was not binding on them that the debt incurred by their father was not binding on them or any other ground that their interest in the joint family property had not passed to the auction-purchaser. 44 I.A. 1 Rel. (Macleod, C.J and Crump, J.) DADA JINAPPA v. YESU SAKHOBA. 25 Bom. L.R. 495 = 1923 Bom. 450.

———What passes under—Sale in lots—Realisation of proceeds.

Where property is sold in execution in several lots, the proceeds are deemed as not realized, until the entire amount of purchase-money in respect of all the parcels is paid into Court. (Mookerjee, A.C.J. and Fletcher, J.) BARENDRA NATH MITTER v. MARTEN & CO. 62 I.C. 167 = 33 C.L.J. 7.

———What passes under—Question of intention—Impartible estate.

The question what the Court intended to sell and the purchaser intended to buy is a question of fact or rather of mixed law and fact and must be decided on evidence, e.g. the character of the debt, the frame of the suit, the judgment and decree, the terms of the sale proclamation, the adequacy of the price, the law at the time of the sale, etc. (Miller and Abdur Rahim, JJ.) SOMASUNDARA v. MURUGAPPA. 36 Mad. 325 = (1913) M.W.N. 86 = 12 M.L.T. 571 = 18 I.C. 49 = 23 M.L.J. 658.

———What passes under—Mixed question of fact and law.

In an execution sale what the Court intended to sell and what the purchaser understood he bought is a mixed question of law and fact. How the parties themselves viewed it, at the time, is of much greater value than evidence procurable some twenty years after the transaction. In determining what the Court intended to sell, the state of the law at the time of sale is not conclusive. (White, C.J. and Phillips, J.) ALAGARAYA GOUNDAN v. MINAKSHI NAIDU. 37 Mad. 22 = 24 M.L.J. 652 = 10 M.L.T. 298 = 12 I.C. 389 = (1911) 2 M.W.N. 328.

EXECUTION SALE—What passes under.

——What passes under.

The test is what the Court intends to sell and what the purchaser understands that he bought the question of what the Court could, or should have sold does not arise. 10 Mad. 241 (P. C.); 27 Mad. 131. Foll. (Baker, O.J.C.) SAKHARAM v. GITABAI. 1923 Nag. 333.

——What passes under—House and site—Sale of house without site—Rights of purchaser.

Where in execution of a money decree a house is sold without the site on which it stands, the purchaser cannot get possession of the house without also getting possession of the site. (Batten, J.C.) RAMASA v. GAMBHIR CHANDSA. 6 N.L.J. 25=1923 Nag. 150.

——What passes under—Right, title and interest of judgment-debtor—Rights of decree-holder in a different capacity.

An auction-purchaser in execution of a money decree derives his title from the judgment-debtor and not from the decree-holder. A purchaser at an auction-sale purchases only the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor and not any right which the judgment-creditor might have to set aside or question the validity of any deed which had been previously made by the judgment-debtor himself. (Mitra, A. J. C.) NARAINRAO v. FATHELAL. 43 I.C. 907=15 N.L.R. 46.

——What passes under—Trees—Pass with land—Shade rights.

A sale in execution of trees belonging to the judgment-debtor passes the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor to the purchaser and the former cannot claim any shade right in respect of those trees. (Mitra, J.C.) GANGARAM v. YASHODABAI. 42 I.C. 261= 13 N.L.R. 163.

——What passes under — Validity of—Person not a party.

Persons who are not parties to a decree are not bound by it and ordinarily sale in execution does not operate to pass property of persons not bound by it. (Lindsay, J.C.) JADU NATH SINGH v. AFZAL KHANAM. 8 O L.J. 191= 7 O.L.J. 862=37 I.C. 526= 2 U.P.L.R. (J.C.) 118

——What passes under—Sale of portion of the judgment debtor's property without statement of his proportionate shares.

In execution of a joint and several decree against the defendant and his co-sharers, plaintiffs applied for sale of the joint property, of which only a portion was sanctioned. Plaintiffs bought it at the sale. But the sale proclamation and the sale certificate did not contain the proportionate interest of the several judgment-debtors. Held, that the auction-purchasers must be deemed to have purchased the whole and not merely the defendant's interest in the portion directed to be sold. (Lindsay, J.C.) BABU MAHENDRA NATH DAB SINGH v. JADUNATH SINGH. 21 I.C. 262.

——What passes under.

Where the D Register could not be reconciled with the khatian and khewat and where the words "Panch gunda Minjumle das gunda Pokhta" were used in execution proceedings. Held, the auction-purchaser would be entitled to five gundas share in the village. (Coutts and Adami, JJ.) RASIK BEHARI PRASAD CHAUDHURI v. HIRDENARAIN CHAUDHURI. 1923 P. 30.

——What passes under—Rent sale for whole tenure—One village named in proclamation—Sale certificate—Effect of.

In a suit for recovery of the entire rent due in respect of the whole tenure comprising five villages one of the villages B alone was mentioned in the plaint and the names of other villages were omitted. In execution of the rent decree the property was attached under the description of 'Bijulia asli maidakhri' and in the sale proclamation and in the certificate for sale the property was described as two annas eight pies 'Bijulia asirmi dakhilk. Held, that the whole tenure passed by the execution sale and not the village Bijulia only. ——Rights of—Probate—Effect of—Grant—Administrator.

The authority and title of an executor is derived from the will of his testator and not from any grant of probate. The personal property of the testator including all rights of action, vests in him upon the testator's death, and the consequence is that he can institute an action in the character of executor before he proves the will. He cannot obtain a decree before probate, but this is not because his title depends on probate, but because the production of probate is the only way in which, by the rules of Court, he is allowed to prove his title. An administrator, on the other hand, derives his title only from the grant. (Lord Parker.) SOONA MAVANA KENA ROONA MEYAPPA CHETTY v. ———S. 14—Transfer of a case.

As to the first of these prayers we think that we have no power to order the transfer of an enquiry under the Extradition Act, S. 14, as the Magistrate's competency to hold the inquiry depends upon the authorization of the executive Government and the High Court cannot request the Government to appoint another Magistrate with such powers nor dictate the procedure to be followed. The warrant of arrest under which the accused was arrested in extradition proceedings referred to the offence of escaping from lawful custody but the warrant was issued on a petition charging him with theft which is an extraditable offence. Held, that the extradition proceedings were taken in respect of an extraditable offence. In the circumstance of the case, the accused who had been in custody for a period exceeding two months had not been committed to prison under S. 3 (4) of the Extradition Act, and consequently S. 3 (10) was inapplicable to entitle him to be discharged by the High Court. ———Acquiescence in, for a long period—Estoppel.

A Hindu died in 1856 leaving behind him a widow and three daughters. Under an arrangement in 1875 the widow divided the whole of the property among her three daughters and her grandsons then living. The daughters and grandsons entered into immediate possession of their lots and mutation of names was effected in their favour. Subsequently each of the daughters dealt with the property allotted to her on the division as her own absolute property. In 1884 one of the daughters sold a portion of her share of the property to the defendant. She died in 1912, and in 1913, her surviving sister brought a suit for recovery of possession of the property alienated claiming that in consequence of the death of her mother and sisters, she had become the sole heir of her father and was entitled to possession. Held, that the plaintiff was bound by her own agreement and that in view of the long period of time which had elapsed since the arrangement was made she could not be allowed to repudiate the agreement and to impeach a sale which was made on the faith of it. ———Consideration—Giving up of property under threat of litigation—Effect of.

For a valid family settlement there must be a bona fide dispute which is bona fide settled by the members of family. There is a difference between a settlement in consideration of the settlement of family disputes or even of the screening of family scandals and yielding up property on a threat of litigation. The former transaction should bind the members of the family though they may have been minors at the time, but the latter can at best only bind the parties to it. Hence where the defendant puts forward a baseless claim to the property to which he was not rightfully entitled and the persons legally entitled thereto gave it up in order to avoid litigation. Held, ——— Consideration—Bona fide dispute with female owner — Duty of Court to uphold arrangement—Reversioners, if can question.

The several members of a family effected a settlement of their dispute each relinquishing all claim in respect of all property in dispute other than that falling to his share and recognizing the right of the others as they had previously asserted it to the portion allotted to them respectively. The settlement thus effected was bona fide settlement for the benefit of the family. A partition of the estate followed thereupon and the parties acted on its terms. The Courts were bound to give full effect to it. Such settlement is not open to objection by reversioners by means of a suit to establish their right to some of the properties. ———Consideration — Disputed claim — Parties not entitled to resile from—Relinquishment—Effect of.

Per Mookerjee, J.—A statement of a disputed or doubtful claim is a valid and binding arrangement which the parties thereto are not permitted to deny, ignore or repudiate. This principle, is however, inapplicable to a case where there was no dispute to put an end to, when the compromise was effected and the consideration of the compromise was not the sacrifice of a right but the amendment of a claim. 38 I.C. 273=33 C.L.J. 82.

——Consideration—Widow—Repudiation.

Where under a family arrangement an agreement was entered into by which a reversioner was put in possession of some property by the widow and there was a good consideration for the agreements executed by them by which the reversioner abstained from suing to set aside the gift by the widow, the widow or her transferee are not entitled to sue for possession of property and to repudiate the contract. (Reid, C.J. and Kensington, J.) MUHAMMAD UMAR ALI v. AMAN ALI. 251 P.L.R. 1911= 12 I.C. 140=170 P.W.R. 1911.

——Consideration — Separate releases—Value of.

In family arrangement to settle family affairs and have peace among the female members if separate releases are executed by the members of its various branches in favour of the sole senior member of one branch, each of such releases will be valid and binding as one of a series of transactions by which the family arrangment was secured and when a major member executes a release deed on the footing that certain debts exist, the deed is prima facie evidence of the existence of such debts. (Wallis, C.J. and Seshagiri Aiyar, J.) ABDUL HUSSAIN v. MAHOMED IBRAHIM. 3 L W. 379= 35 I.C. 243=19 M.L.T. 346.

——Consideration—Binding nature of—Inquiry into antecedent rights of parties.

In judging of the validity of a compromise, Courts are not entitled to inquire into the rights of parties as they stood before the compromise to see whether the compromise has recognised them, the inquiry should be restricted to the question, whether the claims advanced by either side were bona fide and whether the compromise really is in settlement of such claims. Every compromise may involve the giving up of certain claims to which a party may be rightly entitled, and the acquisition of interests to which he may have no claim. But if such compromise is a settlement of disputes advanced bona fide, then prima facie, it ought to be upheld. This reason applied with greater force in cases of family settlements where the peace of the family is involved, and especially so when the settlements were effected long before the date of the dispute between the parties. (Sundara Aiyar and Ayling, JJ.) AUTHI LAKSHMI v. ANNASAMY AIYAR.

——Consideration—Present or future disputes.

To validate family settlement, it is not necessary that there should be an existing dispute. It is sufficient that there should be the possibility of a future dispute which might result in litigation. The avoidance of future litigation and the consequent preservation of the family property is sufficient consideration for a family settlement. (Lyle and Ashworth, J.Cs.) ——Descendants and heirs—Bona fide dispute—Right to succession—T. P. Act, S. 6—Chance of heir apparent—Settlement as dispute.

The existence of a bona fide dispute is a good consideration sufficient to support a contract even though the claim which caused the dispute turn out afterwards to have no foundation. Held, that the agreement in question being a family arrangement was binding on the parties and their representatives and was not void under S. 6 of the T.P. ———Descendants and heirs—Reasonableness.

The reasonableness of family settlement is to be gathered from the state of the family at the time of the settlement and not from its condition when that has to be determined by the Courts. As the creation of the ijara and darijara by a Hindu widow in respect of her husband's estate is a part of a general family settlement effected for the benefit of the estate and injured nobody and as the conduct of the objecting reversioners raised a presumption that they believed the arrangement to have been made in good faith and under such circumstances of necessity, as would give it validity according to Hindu Law, and as it has always been a feature to Hindu Law to attach great weight to the sanction by expectant reversioners of an alienation of property by a Hindu woman, as affording evidence that the alienation was under circumstances which rendered it lawful and valid, the reversioners could not question it. There were disputes regarding the succession to the properties between the son's daughters and the father's daughter's son. In 1860 a compromise was made under which the daughters of the son obtained from the Court of Wards possession 8½ annas share of the property and the convert's heir-at-law 7½ annas share. In a suit for ejectment after the death of the surviving daughter by the son's reversionary heirs on the ground that the defendants who were purchasers from the convert's heir at law, claimed under an alienation from the daughters without justifying necessity. Held, that the compromise was a family settlement and not an alienation and the defendants did not derive title from the daughters. The compromise was based on the title of the parties existing antecedent thereto and acknowledged and defined thereby. 19 A. 187, Rel. ——Limited owner—Reversioners.

The true test to be applied to a transaction, challenged by the reversioners as an alienation not binding upon them, but which is alleged to be a family settlement, is whether the alienee derives title from the holder of the limited interest or life-tenant. There may be a family arrangement between heirs or possible claimants by inheritance but there can be no family arrangement as between legatees or alienees to which the reversionary heirs are not parties. A limited owner can bind the reversion by a compromise, in which each party takes a share of the family property, and under which each gets an independent title to his share as admitted by the other. But it must be shown that the limited owner acted bona fide and for the preservation and benefit of the estate. When there is doubt as to whether a transaction is alienation or compromise of doubtful claim, the test is to see whether the alienee gets title from the limited owner. If there was some kind of pre-existing title and it was perfected or set at rest by the transaction, the transaction is a compromise of doubtful claim. If a fair compromise is arrived at, to preserve the harmony and honour of the family, it will be upheld by the Court, though it rests on not quite satisfactory grounds. But the right compromised must at least be such as to form the subject-matter of a claim. The right of a Hindu reversioner is a naked possibility and cannot form the basis of a claim. Meaning and Tests of.

———Meaning and tests of—Where operative.

A family arrangement, to be operative must be without fraud and will not be supported if founded on mutual mistake or if either party has been misled by the concealment of material thing. ———Meaning and tests of—Award is not enforceable as a family settlement.

A family settlement implies a mutual settlement by certain contending parties belonging to the same family of some disputed claims and rights and an award of arbitrators is not a settlement of that character. It is the decision of a tribunal constituted by the contending parties for the settlement of their dispute and in so far as it is a valid and lawful award, it is binding on the parties to the arbitration proceedings and their successors.

FAMILY ARRANGEMENT— Minors, when bound.

Whether such an award is binding on persons whose interests are analogous to those of the parties to the arbitration proceedings is a matter which is not capable of an inflexible answer. In each case it has to be determined whether the person who agreed to the reference to arbitration was seeking to assert a right common to himself and others and had acted fairly in representing those whose interest he had undertaken to protect. (Kanhaiya Lal and Dalal, A.J.Cs.) CHAUDHRAIN ZARIF-UN-NISSA v. CHAUDHRI SHAFIQUZ ZAMAN. 26 O.C. 133 = 1923 Oudh 185.

———Meaning and tests of.

Where the several members of a family settle a dispute each one relinquishing all claim to the property not falling to his share and recognising the right of the others as they had previously asserted it to the portion alloted to them respectively, the transaction is called the family arrangement and must be upheld as such. The test of such an arrangement is the recognition of a pre-existing title and not a derivation of title from each other. (Lindsay, J.C.) DALIP SINGH v. KASHI NATH. 24 I.C. 542 = 17 O.C. 108.

———Meaning and tests of— Real meaning ought to be ascertained—Effect to be given as much as possible.

The Courts should ascertain the real meaning of the parties to family settlements and should give effect to as much of it as possible if the whole cannot be given effect to. (Evans, J.C. and Lindsay, A.J.C.) MAHOMED HASHIM ALI KHAN v. SADI HUSENKHAN. 13 I.C. 882 = 14 O.C. 356.

———Meaning and tests of—Binding nature-Principles applicable.

A fair compromise of family disputes will be upheld by a Court though resting on grounds which as between strangers may not be satisfactory. The rights compromised should be of such a nature that they could at least have formed the subject-matter of a claim, though a doubtful one. When entered into by a limited owner, in order to bind reversioners, it must be a fair and honest one representing the estate and for its protection. The principle applies not only for preserving the peace but also for preserving the property. In the absence of proof of mistake, inequality of position, undue influence, fraud, etc., a family arrangement made in settlement of a disputed or doubtful claim is valid and binding and cannot be set aside merely on the basis that one party got more or less than that he would have legally got. When minors are sought to be bound, it must be shown it was for their benefit. (Bucknill and Ross, JJ.) RAM BAHADUR SEN v. GANESH BHAGAT. 2 Pat. 854 = 1924 P. 49.

———Minors, when bound—Dispute, claim.

In the absence of proof of mistake, inequality of position, undue influence, coercion, fraud or any similar ground, a partition or family arrangement made in settlement of a disputed or doubtful claim is a valid and binding arrangement which the parties thereto cannot deny, ignore or resile from. If the parties have settled a dispute, such settlement will not be set aside on the ground that it gave to one of them more than what he ought possibly to have received if he had taken the judgment of the Court upon the matters in difference between them. The Courts will not be disposed to scan with much nicety the amount of consideration. There is nothing in this doctrine of family agreements opposed to the general principle that, when it is sought to bind a minor by an arrangement entered into on his behalf, it must be shown that the agreement was for the benefit of the minor and that no improper advantage has been taken of the minor's position. When there is no defect, the settlement of doubtful claim is of as much advantage to a minor as to an adult and where a genuine dispute has been fairly settled the dispute cannot be reopened on the ground that one of the parties to the family arrangement was a minor. ———Minors, when bound—Test to be applied to.

Tests to be satisfied before family compromises entered into on behalf of minors will be upheld are:—(1) There must be a full disclosure of all material circumstances in the knowledge of the parties thereto whether the information withheld was asked for by the other contracting parties or not, (2) all the members of the family should have been treated impartially, (3) if the parties are not on equal terms but one of them stands in such relation to the other as renders it incumbent on him to give a fuller account of the matter or question in dispute than he has done, the Court, although no intentional fraud may be imputable to such person, will not support the compromise. ———Jalkar—Grant by Government—Navigable river—Change of course—Right to follow the river—English Law.

A grantee of a jalkar (exclusive fishery) from the Government in Bengal, in a tidal and navigable river, can follow the shifting river for the enjoyment of his exclusive fishery so long as the waters form part of the river system within the upstream and downstream limits of his grant, whether the subjacent soil belongs to the Government or a private proprietor as being the site of the river's recent encroachment and whether shifting of the channel is gradual or is the result of sudden eruption. In this respect the law in India is different from the English Law. The rule in England which connects the subject's right to an exclusive fishery in tidal and navigable rivers within the limits of the Crown's ownership of the subjacent soil is the result of conditions partly historical and partly geographical which have no counterpart in Bengal. 23 I.C. 186.

———River bed—Right claimed in other waters—Court how to adjudge—Jalker—Shifting course of river—Right to follow river.

The right of fishery (Jalkar) in a river, extends over all the waters which form part of the river. The jalkar rights of a river extend to waters in the river bed though they are not connected with the flowing stream throughout the year. The grantee of a jalkar may fish in all waters comprised within the banks of the river though the particular sheets of water may during a part of the year be disconnected from permanent current. 17 C.W.N. 1173 = 21 I.C. 233 = 18 C.L.J. 399.

———Public navigable waters—Government or proprietor of estate whether entitled.

The Government is prima facie the owner of fishery right in all public navigable waters whether tidal or not. But the rights of fishery in small rivers which are tidal but not navigable belong to the proprietors through whose estates they run. (Richardson and Newbould, JJ.) SHRIMANTA BAGDI v. NIRANTAR JELIA.

19 I.C 893 = 17 C.W.N. 1108.

———Private rights—How acquired—Prescription.

Private rights of fishing in public waters may be acquired either by a grant from the Crown or by prescription from which a grant may be presumed. Quaere—Whether exclusive rights can be acquired in a tidal or navigable river by proof of mere enjoyment in the manner provided by S. 26 of the Limitation Act. A person to acquire the right of fishery, by prescription must show that he had an uninterrupted enjoyment of it openly, publicly and peacefully for over the statutory period; but where such an enjoyment was in exercise of a common right which he shared with others, he should show that his user was in assertion of a higher right than the general right, in himself and for his exclusive benefit. (Coze and Teunon, JJ.) ABHOY CHARAN v. DWARKA NATH MALO 39 Cal. 53 = 11 I.C. 180 = 15 C.W.N. 972.

——Landlord and tenant—Lost grant claiming exclusive right—Declaration and injunction.

In a suit by plaintiff for a declaration of his exclusive title to the fishery rights in a tank and for an injunction to restrain the defendants from interfering with his rights, defendants claimed the right to the fishery rent and the defendants proved the long and continued enjoyment pleaded by them. Held, that it was for the plaintiff to establish his title in defiance of the defendants' claim arising from it. It was not enough for the plaintiff to prove his ownership of the tank and rely simply on the presumption that the right of fishery being an incident of the right of ownership vested in him. Per Krishnan, J.—Where the facts required for raising a presumption of a lost grant were stated and evidence was all taken and the Courts have given their opinion on the evidence, it is not necessary for the High Court in second appeal to raise a specific issue and call for a fresh finding. It may well be that, where a right of fishery was claimed as first vested in the ryots of a village as a body, no question of unreasonableness will arise. The right claimed is a right in gross. 22 M.L.T. 333 = 41 I.C. 419 = 6 L.W. 769.

——Grant of—Rights of grantee to the soil—Grant of soil.

A proprietor can lease out a fishery without giving any rights to the soil or the bed upon which the water lies and he can then let out the land subject to the rights of the lessee of the fishery. If, on the other hand, he lets out the land first, he cannot claim the right to the water and fish that come upon the land afterwards. The landlord may reserve the right of fishery when letting out the land, but such a reservation is, strictly speaking, a re-grant of the right by the tenant to the landlord. (Mullick and Ross, JJ.) FRONTIER CRIMES REGULATION (III OF 1901.)

——Ss. 8 and 60—Decree under S. 8—Civil Court cannot question validity—Suit pending in Civil Court—Effect.

A decree passed under section 8 of Regn. III of 1901 whether passed wrongly or rightly is an actually subsisting decree and, under section 60 of the Frontier Crimes Regulation, it cannot be called in question or set aside by any Civil Court. The decree certainly cannot be set aside by a Civil Court. Even if the finding of the Civil Court conflicts with that decree, the decree could not be finally extinguished unless and until the Chief Commissioner had set it aside in the exercise of the powers of the revision. This however, is not the same thing as holding that the Civil Court cannot proceed at all with a suit which is before it, simply because some illegal proceedings under S. 10 has been taken after the suit. What the Civil Court is entitled to do is not to call in question the proceedings or the validity of the decree, but simply to ignore them. It is perfectly clear, that section 8 cannot, in any circumstances, legally come into operation at all when a civil suit is already pending. The Civil Court has entertained the suit with jurisdiction, so far as this question is concerned, to entertain it, and no illegal proceedings by any outside authority in contravention of the provisions of law could possibly affect its jurisdiction to continue the hearing of the case. An illegal proceeding under section 8, Frontier Crimes Regulation, cannot in any circumstances, oust the jurisdiction of a Civil Court to continue the trial of a civil suit which has been legally instituted before it prior to any proceedings under section 8, Frontier Crimes Regulation. The existence of S 239 specifically dealing with the case of several accused, and the arrangement of the sections relating to joinder of charges, constitute such a repugnancy in the context as prevents the reading of the words "a person" in section 234 as including several persons, by applying the provision of the General Clauses Act that words in the singular shall include the plural. Though the powers conferred on the High Court under S. 107 of the Govt. of India Act are extensive enough to authorise the Court, in the exercise of its discretion, to send for the record of such a proceeding in a Subordinate Court, namely, the record of an enquiry conducted by a District Judge with a view to drawing up a list of persons proved to be touts, and to examine such record and thereafter issue such orders or instructions to the District Judge as might appear to be proper, the High Court would not interfere in the exercise of its powers of superintendence, where the sole ground upon which interference was asked for was that the decision of the District Judge was against the weight of the evidence. GRANT—Construction.

Contemporanea expositio as a guide to the interpretation of documents is often accompanied with danger and must be applied very carefully. Where, however, the document to be interpreted was a sanad granted by the Government of a general and informal character and the ambiguity covered the geographical and pecuniary extent of an admittedly ambiguous grant. Held, that it was legitimate to observe what the footing was on which the grantors, namely, the Government and its officials, from the date of the grant and for a long period of time proceeded. The words 'the lands attached to Daur' in the sanad in this case dated 1861, whereby the title of 'Rajah' was conferred on the father of the parties to the suit, extended to the whole of the lands in the Bombay Presidency scheduled to the plaint. Having regard to the fact that the lands had been jagir prior to the grant and for a long period of time had been treated as an appendage to the title of Rajah by the Government, its successors and officials, the estate must be held to be impartible and the succession to it subject to the law of primogeniture. The enjoyment of a right of way for about 70 years is evidence of a grant or other legal origin. In claiming right of way, the plaintiff should state whether he claims the right by prescription, grant, or in any other way and the defendant should know by which title the plaintiff claims the right as otherwise he might be seriously prejudiced. Where, however, the plaint stated facts, which if proved, would be evidence of a grant and also establish a right by prescription and an issue was framed sufficiently wide to cover both the aspects of the right, there can be no prejudice to the defendant. The mere fact that in occasional correspondence the grant is referred to as "jagir" or "saranjam", i.e, political, cannot derogate from the effect of the language of the grant itself. The question whether the tenure was political was one which was for determination by the Government under the provisions of the interpretation S 16 of the Summary Settlement Act (II of 1863) and that, by treating the title as one to which the act applied, the Government must determine that the tenure was not political. The ancestors of the testator had held the office of Desai (Chief Revenue Officer) under native rulers from the 17th century, and from time to time received grants of villages. The services of the desais as Revenue Collectors were not required by the British Government. In 1862 the Government officials after an investigation, offered a summary settlement of the lands to the Desai who accepted it subject to the commutation payment in the nature of a Nazarana or quit-rent. Settlements so made were expressly validated by S. 12 of Bom. Act II of 1863. ———Inam—Resumption — Land burdened with services—Grants of office to which lands are annexed by way of remuneration—Onus.

For the purposes of resumption, grants fall into two main categories, grants of land burdened with service, and grants of office to which lands are annexed by way of remuneration instead of, or along with cash. The former grants are always irresumable, unless the grantor can show that they have been specially conditioned so as to enable him to resume for failure to perform these services or at his own will to discontinue the service and resume the lands. Grants under the second category are always resumable unless the grantee can show that they have been specially conditioned otherwise so as to prevent their resumability. In every case the burden of proof is upon the grantor suing to resume, to show that either the grant was of a kind falling under the second category, or if a grant of the kind, falling under the first category, that it was specially conditioned. 28 B. 305, 39 B. 68; 18 Bom. ———Inam—Crown grants, construction of—Presumption—Minor Inams — Occupancy right—Onus of proof.

A crown grant of an Inam in the absence of evidence one way or the other must be taken to be a grant of both the Melvaram and the Kudivaram. The two judgments of the Privy Council in Suryanarayana v. Patanna, 41 M. 1012 and Venkata Sastrulu v. Sitaramudu, 43 M. 166 do not expressly lay down a presumption that the grant is of both the Melvaram and the Kudivaram but such an initial presumption is deducible from the facts of those cases. Where the Government, makes a grant of land at its absolute disposal, a third person cannot deprive the grantee's title on the ground that he was a landlord of the grantee and such third person's prior right as landlord is destroyed by the act of grant of the Government. There is no presumption of law that an inam grant of a village is prima facie a grant of the land revenue only. The terms of the grant, and whole circumstances connected therewith have to be looked into. Darimilla inams are inams granted subsequent to the Permanent Settlement for doing personal service to the Zemindar in lieu of wages. Certain 'Gadaba Tirasti' lands in the Vizagapatam District had been granted in inam subsequent to the Permanent Settlement for doing personal service to the Zemindar in lieu of wages. They had been once ordinary Jirayati lands at the time of the grant and the character of the enjoyment was not at any time lost or altered in the course of its devolution to the present occupants. The Zamindar sued to resume the lands and eject the tenants. Held, that the onus lay on the Zemindar to show a right to eviot. Resumption is no more than a taking back of what was once given and does not necessarily imply dispossession from land. The acquiescence of Inamdars in the enhancement of the Kattubadi implied no more than a readiness on their part to accept a lower rate of remuneration for their services than they had been receiving originally. Government may grant kudiwaram to one person and the melwaram to another simply; similarly though both the kudiwaram and the melwaram may be combined in the hands of Government there is nothing to prevent it from treating them as distinct interests and granting them to the same person. ———Jagir — Resumable grants —Circumstances leading to the inference that grant is resumable—Service tenures—'Resumption'.

Where the jagir was specifically mentioned as a service tenure involving the performance of police and other duties and the settlement with the Taluqdar showed that the rent was increased from Rs. 735 to Rs. 1,000, four villages were taken out of the Pargana and set apart for the maintenance of the widows of the previous holder and a new patta was granted to him by the Maharajah and a new Parvana was issued to him at the zemindar's instance for possession of the jagir: Held, in face of these facts it is idle to contend that the settlement with the taluqdar was a continuance of the old tenure. Had the talukdar succeeded to the jagir by right of inheritance, the maintenance of the Ranis, the widows, would have had no concern with it or the right to take away any part of the property to provide for their maintenance. The Maharaja's interference on behalf of the widows is explainable only on one hypothesis, that he was making a new arrangement by virtue of a right recognized by the authorities. "Resumption" in connection with these service tenures does not mean that on failure of the direct male line it "escheats to the Zemindar and becomes what is called his Sir or khas property; the jagir retains its character, but the Zemindar becomes entitled to make a new settlement with the knowledge and sanction of the authorities. GRANT—Jagir.

A jagir is to be taken prima facie an estate for life only though it might be granted in such terms as to be heritable. In order to make the estate one of inheritance, the terms making the grant must, if they are to be considered alone, be unambiguous and must clearly show whether it was intended by the grantor that the right of inheritance should be general or should be confined to a particular class of heirs. A village in Raj Ramgarh, Chota-Nagpur was granted as jagir, to be enjoyed by the grantee (the brother of the then Zemindar) putrapoutradi. The evidence in the case showed that succession to jagirs in the locality had always been in the male line of the grantee. Held, that the jagir was resumable by the descendants of the grantor upon failure of the grantee's male descendants. 7 C. 304 ; 24 C. 834, Dist. A grant in jagir of the ordinary character implies no grant of the soil but a personal grant only of the revenue to the grantee. It is personal and not hereditary and is resumable at pleasure and being personal and temporary, is necessarily impartible. A custom of primogeniture would be radically inconsistent with the personal and non-transmissive character of a grant in jaghir. The term 'Saranjam' is the Marathi equivalent to the term jagir. The term 'inam' is one of more generic significance and is applicable to a Government grant as a whole and includes a Saranjam. ——Jagir—Jagirs by Native princes for Police services—Service tenure—Ejectment.

In a suit for the ejectment of the Sarbarakar in certain mouzas in Zillah Kurdah, Orissa, the lands were found to be one of those jaghirs granted by Native princes for certain services and also paying certain light quit-rent. The service consisted in maintaining Paiks for performing Police and military duties. After confiscation by British Government these lands were treated as Khas Mahal and at the Settlements were resumed, though the Dalbehars (hereditary military chiefs) were engaged for the collection and payment of Government Revenue under the name of Sarbarakars. In 1861 the Government of Bengal made a grant of the village in which the suit jagir land was situate to the Mathadharis who thus became the owners of village free from the interference of the Government officials. The Mathadharis now claimed to have dismissed the defendant, who was in possession of some Sarbark jagirs in the village from service as if he were a mere servant or officer first of Government and then of Mathadharis. Held, that the Sarbarakars were something higher than mere servants and from 1861 were treated by Mathadhris as tenants and the defendants therefore could not be ejected. Each new Jagirdar gets his Jagir free of claims in connection with his predecessor, and it is doubtful whether funeral expenses of the previous holder are a legal charge on the Jagir income. A declaratory decree in a favour of a Jagirdar who refused to pay funeral expenses was refused especially because he did not claim refund of expenses paid under order of Collector. ——Jagir—Berar Inam rules—Rules governing such grants.

———Jagir—Berar.

The Berar Inam Rules of 1859 modified to the extent stated in the Sanad Certificate in each case are applicable to every grant of Jagirs in Berar, whatever the circumstances under which it was made or the special conditions attached to it may be. In case of a grant which is merely a remission of the revenue, the actual benefit of the remission cannot be restricted to some only of the already existing owners of the proprietary interest or to particular heirs, and for that reason such a grant practically amounts to grant to all the existing shares and all their heirs during the continuance by the particular persons or the particular heirs to whom the grant is made. But where a grant of the proprietary interest is combined with a remission of the revenue there are no circumstances or vested interests, which compel the grantee to share the benefit of the grant with others, the devolutions as well as the duration of the whole estate are regulated by the operation of the terms of the grant. Similarly the wife of the younger sons gets by way of sohag grant, the usufruct of a portion of the Raj estate for the maintenance of herself and her male descendants in the male line. for the time being on the failure of male descendants in the male line of the grantee. Babuana and Sohag grants differ essentially from absolute grants and are subject to the kulachar (family custom) under which they are authorised and in accordance with which they are made. Widows and daughters and the descendants of daughters are by custom applying to such grants excluded from the succession. The fact that there was no evidence of the exclusion of a widow after a partition between the members of the joint family holding properties originally the subject of babuana and sohag grants would not prevent a logical extension of the kulachar to such a case and the custom excluding the widows would apply notwithstanding a partition. Babuana and Sohag grants descend in the family of Dharbanga Raj, not to the eldest male heir of the grantee, but to all the existing male heirs in the male line of the grantee as co-parceners. 36 I.A. 176, Dist. GRANT—Resumption.

———Minerals—Mines—Principles governing rights of grantor and grantee.

When the sub-soil is not expressly granted, a permanent tenure, though hereditary, does not include in it the enjoyment of the mineral rights; and in the case of the grantor having both the ownership and the right of property in the surface and the sub-soil prior to the date of the grant of the land, severance of the surface rights from the property in the sub-soil is presumed at the time of the grant, the grantor's rights being analogous to those of a fee simple free-hold owner in England. This presumption gives the grantor a right to enter on the land for exercising his rights in the sub-soil which are deemed to be reserved to him. The principles of free-hold, and not of copy-hold should govern the case, as under the former system there is no deadlock as there is under the latter, when no reservation or custom is proved. GRANT—Resumption.

——Resumption—Darmilla—Meaning of—Resumable—Where service not required—Considerations of so many things—Nature of tenure—How decided—The burden of proving that it is not resumable is in grantee.

Where the grant is made for "Nakesh" the grant is more or less a Darmilla grant that is a grant subsequent to Permanent Settlement. Such grant is resumable by the grantor when such service is no longer required. In the following circumstances the grant of a certain land as inam is resumable when the services are no longer required. If the grant is made (1) In consideration of past services done, (2) providing that the grantee was to enjoy from son to grandson and so on in succession, (3) with a condition of payment of Kattubadi at Rs. 3 per annum, (4) for a service which is Nakesh or personal. The question whether the grant is resumable or not has to be decided on a consideration of all the circumstances appearing in the evidence, including the nature of the service, the terms of the grant, the question whether the service is attached to any officer known by any particular designation and so on. The nature of a tenure has to be decided upon the evidence in each case and in the case of a grant subsequent to the Permanent Settlement to which services of a personal as opposed to public character are attached, the burden of proving that it is not resumable is on the grantee. Even in the case of the grant of an estate burdened with a certain service, though the zemindar is not ordinarily entitled to resume he is so entitled if in the grant itself appropriate terms are introduced giving the grantor a right to resume the lands on the non-fulfilment of certain conditions. (Ayling and Sadasiva Ayyar, JJ.) KAMARAVUTHU MRUTYUNJAYUDU v. RAVU VENKATA KUMAR MAHIPATHI. 26 I.C. 78 = (1914) M.W.N. 936.

——Resumption—Service and office grant.

There is a distinction between the grant of an estate burdened with service and the grant of an office the duties of which are compensated by the use of certain land. A grant burdened with service cannot be resumed, merely because the necessity for the service is over, though it may be forfeited for wilful failure in the service. The other class of grants are resumable. The Zemindar can resume where a service grant is included in the mal assets of a Zemindari at the Permanent Settlement. A tenure has to be decided upon the evidence in each case. A grantee must show that a grant subsequent to the Permanent Settlement to which services personal as opposed to public are attached is not resumable. (White, C.J. and Phillips, J.) VADISAPU APPANDERA v. VYRICHERLA VEERABHADRARAJU.
10 M.L.T. 391 = 12 I.C. 487 = (1911) 2 M.W.N. 406.

——Resumption—Transferability.

A resumable grant is not transferable. A marwat grant is not transferable although it is not resumable. (Simpson, A.J.C.) SIYA RAM v. SALIK. 10 O.L.J. 835 = 5 L.R. Oudh 13 = 1924 Oudh 124.

GRANT—Rights of Grantee.

——Resumption—Service grant.

No suit lies for resumption of a service grant in the absence of any allegation of specific service. (Holms, S. M.) MUHAMMAD ALI MUHAMMAD v. SHAUKATALI. 34 I.C. 713 = 3 O.L.J. 231.

——Resumption—Effect of.

The object of the Government in Bengal in the resumption proceedings was not to resume the lands and to re-settle the lands with the persons who originally held them. The resumption was not of the land but of the revenue and resumption meant nothing more than assessing the land to Government revenue. (Das and Bucknill, JJ.) MAHANT RAMRUP GIR v. LAL CHAND MARWARI.
1 P. 475 = 3 P.L.T. 352 = 1922 P. 243.

Rights of Grantee.

——Rights of grantee—Grant of land bounded by stream—Partition grant.

Where land is bounded by a stream is granted the grantee gets the bed of the stream up to the middle point. The grant, however, may contain reservations. This construction applies to a grant in partition just as to any other grant. A grant is usually construed in favour of the grantee rather than of the grantor. Hence, where an agreement for partition was entered into between owners of lands bounded by a stream, and the plaintiff claimed thereunder all the land on the southern side of the river and the bed of the river up to the middle point, and the exclusive right of fishing at those points, and the only reservation which the agreement showed was about the use of wells, tanks and water-courses; held, that the plaintiff could get the bed of the river up to the middle point together with the right of fishing. (Richards, C.J. and Sunder Lal, J.) POWELL v. POWELL. 36 I.C. 567 = 14 A.L.J. 684.

——Rights of grantee—Partibility.

The ordinary rule is that if persons are entitled beneficially to shares in an estate, they may have a partition except when the estate is held on an impartible tenure or where the terms of the grant impose a condition upon its enjoyment that the management should rest with a particular branch of the family of the grantees. Incidents of Saranjam considered. (Dhobley, A. J. C.) KRISHNAJI v. NILAKANTH. 18 N.L.R. 163 = 6 N.L.J. 26 = 1922 Nag. 52.

——Rights of grantee—Accretions—Right to.

The question whether property subsequently acquired by the grantee is to be considered a portion of the grant depends on the proof of the intention to incorporate it with the grant. (Stuart and Kanhaiya Lal, A J.Cs.) MAHAMMAD ABDUL RAQUIB KHAN v. SALAMAT BIBI. 25 I C 680=1 O L J 7.

Ryotwari Patta.

Grant of patta to a Mirasidar by Government does not destroy occupancy rights that may exist at the time of the grant. (Benson and Sundara Aiyar, JJ.) VENKATACHALA GOUNDAN v. RANGRATNAM AIYAR. 13 M.L T. 450=(1913) M.W.N. 434=20 I C. 874=24 M.L J. 871.

[Affirmed by 56 I.C. 117=43 Mad. 567 (P.C.)]

Sankalp.

Sankalp—Under-proprietary holding.

A sankalp is a grant but it may be grant of a leasehold of a non-transferable tenure not liable to termination at the will of the grantor or on the happening of any contingency. The former invests the sankalp holder with the status of a mere privileged lessee and the latter makes him an under-proprietor. (Kanhaiya Lal, J.C.) JANKI v. GANGA PAL 53 I.C. 975.

Saranjam.

———Saranjam—Presumption.

A grant of Saranjam may be either of the soil and the whole revenue derived from it, or a grant of the Royal share of the revenue only. There is no presumption that a grant of Saranjam is a grant of Royal revenue only. It must be determined in each case upon the facts what was the quality of the original grant although it may be that it is ordinarily a grant of the Royal revenue only. It was plain that the original grant was made in respect of political services; but there was nothing in any of the documents produced which suggested that all that the grant was intended to give to the grantees was a lease from payment of the royal share of the revenue. On the contrary in one of the early documents founded on the grant, mention was made expressly of the Kasba Hebli (subject of the grant) with its hamlets and Wathhoi, with the Mahal Jukath and Mokassa " with the whole of the dues and cesses and hidden treasures, exclusive however of the dues of Hackdars and Inamdars " and the language of the other documents was in similar terms. It was significant also that in the deed of partition executed by the grandfather of the plaintiff in 1979 the property partitioned was described as the Jaghir villages of Kasbe Hebli and Majre Watanhal and the Mouza of Talvai and Kurdapor obtained from the British Government." Throughout the documents there was no suggestion that what was conveyed was merely the Royal share of the land revenue of the lands was conveyed to the grantees and the amount of the nazarana which had been levied from time to time appeared to have been based on the yearly revenue of the estate, " there being no suggestion that the revenue derived by the holder as occupant " was distinct from the Saranjamdar was not liable to Nazarana. Held: All these considerations are sufficient to justify the inference that the original grant was a grant of the soil. (Lord Salvesen). THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL v. LAXMI BAI. 47 Bom. 327=24 M L.J. 471=28 C.W N. 49=17 L.W. 403=32 M.L.T. (P.C.) 111=37 C.L J. 464=28 Bom. L.R. 527=50 I.A. 49=1923 P.C. 6 (P.C.).

———Saranjam—Grant of Miras rights by Saranjamdar—If binding on his successors.

A grant of Miras rights by a Saranjamdar is binding on his successors when the Saranjam descends by inheritance. (Shah and Crump, JJ.) SAKHARAM GOPAL PAGE v. TRIMBAK RAO RAMACHANDRA. 28 Bom. L.R. 315=61 I.C. 40=45 B. 694.

Saranjam or jagir (the terms being convertible), ordinarily means the grant of the royal share of the revenue and not of the soil and the person alleging a grant of soil must prove it. In the case of an inam where the grant is merely of the royal share of the revenue and not of the soil, resumption means only the discontinuance of exemption from payment of land revenue and interference with actual occupation is not allowable. In the case of jagir involving grants of the soil as well as of the royal share of the land revenue the words 'resumption' and 'assessment' mean two different things. A Saranjamdar may acquire occupancy rights which remain unaffected by the resumption of saranjam except as to assessment thereafter payable to the Government. Government can resume the royal share of land revenue but subject to the right to occupation of the saramjandar. (Batchelor and Shah, JJ.) GURURAO v. SECY. OF STATE. 41 Bom. 408=39 I.C. 68=19 Bom. L.R. 117.

Service Grant.

———Service grants — Karnam Lands—Nature of title—Enfranchisement, effect of.

The Karnam of a village holds his office not by hereditary or family right but as personal appointee, though the appointment in certain cases, are exercised by members of a particular family. The lands which form the emoluments of the office do not become the family property and they are inalienable and designed to be the emolument of the officer into whose hands, the office passes. The effect of enfranchisement is to free the lands from their inalienable nature and to empower the Government to deal with them as they pleased. The law applicable to the enfranchisement of Palayams cannot be applied to the case of a karnam office. ———Service grant—Lands remaining long in a family and descending by primogeniture.

Service land is usually inalienable and evidence that it had remained for a long period in a family and descended by rule of primogeniture is more consistent with its being held for service than under any special family custom. ———Service grant—Grant burdened with service—Nakesh.

Where the grant is of this nature "so long as the holders of those grants are willing and able to perform the services the zemindar has no right to put an end to the tenure whether the services are required or not." There is no authority for holding that the nature of services makes any difference in the case of such a grant: though in the case of service grant where lands are enjoyed in lieu of wages, the power of arbitrary resumption would largely turn on whether the services were private or public. When the service performed by the grantee is of a private nature and personal to the grantor and not of public nature or an obligation of a feudal character it is styled as "Nakesh". GUARDIAN AND WARD.

———Admission of guardian as to—Nature of possession—How far binding.

Though a guardian cannot make admissions binding on wards, yet where the question that is being investigated is the nature of the possession of a guardian and he admits he is holding with the consent of the trustees, that will be admissible to prove that it was not adverse. (Schwabe, C.J. and Coutts-Trotter, J.) SHUNMUGAPPA v SANGARAYA CHETTY.
18 L.W. 907=33 M.L.T. (H C.) 226=1924 Mad. 125.

———Arbitration on behalf of ward—Onerous terms in reference—Gross negligence.

The guardian's conduct in waiving the minor's right to object to irregular procedure was grossly negligent and that the minor was not bound by the reference or award. (Spencer and Venkatasubbu Rao, JJ.) CHINTAL APUDI SANYASI v. CHINTAL APUDI VENKATA RAO. 44 M.L.J. 263=17 L.W. 71=(1923) M.W.N. 7=32 M.L.T. 321=1923 Mad. 801.

———Sale by guardian — Subsequent sale by minor—Plea of invalidity—Whether personal

The guardian alienated certain property belonging to the minor. The minor afterwards alienated the same property on attaining majority. The transferee from minor sued for possession. The transferee from guardian objected on the ground that the plea of invalidity of sale not being for necessity nor for minor's benefit, was personal and the transferee cannot put it forth, held, that the transferee can put it forth that plea. (Hallifax, A.J.C.) MOHANLAL v. KISAN. 62 I C. 313=17 N.L.R. 53.

———Agent appointed by guardian—Liability to account.

An agent appointed by a guardian of a minor is not liable to account to the minor for acts done by him as agent, the principle regarding trustees de son tort, not being applicable to him. (Abdur Rahim, O C J., and Ayling, J.) RAMANATHAN v. MUTHIA CHETTY. 43 Mad. 429=38 M.L.J. 247=11 L.W. 405=56 I C. 358=(1920) M.W.N. 270.

———Guardian de facto—Powers of settlement for minor's benefit, if void.

Where in a settlement of accounts between the plff. represented by his mother and maternal grandfather and defts. who were partners with plff 's father, a certain amount was fixed to be paid to plff. and interest to be paid regularly till the amount is paid and the plff.'s next friend his maternal uncle was regularly receiving interest Held, that plff. cannot sue for an account. In cases of urgent and imperative necessity, or where the transaction from its nature must necessarily be beneficial to the minor a de facto guardian can alienate the property of the minor whether moveable or immoveable other acts of a de facto guardian if of a similar nature, are also binding. and the settlement having been accepted and acted upon for so many years by the minor's mother, his maternal grand-father, and even his present next friend, he cannot now turn round and say it was unauthorised and therefore should be set aside without even alleging that the settlement was not fair and bona fide or that it was liable to be opened on account of errors. (Abdur Rahim, O C J. and Seshagiri Iyer, J.) HAJEE SIDDIK HAJEE v. MAHD. HUSHUM SAIT.

———Guardian de facto—Alienation by.

An alienation by de facto guardian not for necessary purposes need not be set aside. (Sadasiva Aiyar and Tyabji, JJ.) THAYAMMAL v. KUPPANNA KOUNDON. 38 Mad 1125=26 I.C. 179=27 M.L J. 285.

———Mother—Alienation by—Guardian de facto—Suit by alienee—Defence.

The want of authority of de facto guardian is a good defence to a suit by a mortgagee against a minor to enforce a mortgage by such guardian. In a suit by the minor to set aside the mortgage a Court might decline to grant relief until the minor compensates the mortgagee for the benefit derived by him. Where a deed is executed by a minor and his mother without the latter describing herself as guardian, the mother cannot be held to be acting for the minor. A creditor seeking to bind a minor's estate should take care that the bond drawn up makes the minor's estate in law liable for the debt. (White, C.J. and Spencer, J.) ARUMUGAM CHETTY v. VELLAICHAMI THEVAN.
37 Mad 38=21 M.L J 1077=10 M.L.T. 385=12 I C. 568=(1911) 2 M.W.N. 461.

———Guardian—Alienation by—Validity.

In a partition suit where the acts of a guardian are impeached by minors after his death, the validity of the dispositions depend upon their beneficial nature at the time they were made. The dispositions can be set aside if there is no evidence as to the beneficial nature. (Abdur Rahim and Ayling, JJ.) ULLIKARA KUTHUVA v. MOHIDEEN BAVA.
12 I C. 54=(1911) 2 M.W.N. 18.

———Contract by guardian — Personal liability of ward.

A guardian cannot contract in the name of his ward, and thus impose a personal liability on the ward; but a ward becomes personally liable under a covenant entered into by the Court of Wards on his behalf under section 61 of the U.P. Court of Wards Act. (Wazir Hassan, A.J.C.) B. PIRTHI PAL SINGH v. RAJA MUHAMMAD EJABY RASUL KHAN.

of the Court, cannot prove necessity for raising the whole money, or prove that he was satisfied as to the necessity for such loan the contract of mortgage is voidable and is liable to be set aside at the option of the minor but the mortgagee will be entitled to a charge on the property for the necessary amount where a portion of the money has been spent for the minor's benefit, a decree ought to be passed subject to a charge in favour of the mortgagee for the amount found to be spent. 10 M.I.A. 454 ; 21 W.R. 287 ; 9 All. 340, Ref. (Piggott, A.J.C.) RAM BHAROSE SINGH v. MATA PROSAD. 14 I.C. 14.

———Guardian —Mortgage by—Subsequent admission by ward—Effect.

Where a mortgage deed by a guardian on behalf of a minor contained recitals as to necessity and there was no other evidence as to necessity and besides the mortgagee had made no enquiries still subsequent admission by the minor on attaining majority that the debt was due from him though not amounting to estoppel or ratification of the transaction nevertheless shifts the burden of proof that the recitals are incorrect on to him and in the absence of such evidence and explanation as to the circumstances in which the admission was made such admissions can be made the basis of a decree. (Chamier and Evans, A.J.Cs.) SHEO NARAYAN SINGH v. MAHABIR PRASAD. 9 I.C. 56.

———How far minor bound by acts of guardian.

A person under disability is no doubt bound by acts of his guardian, but such a person can reopen the proceedings after the disability ceases, if he satisfies the Court that the act of the guardian has prejudiced him. ———Illegitimate children.

Equity Courts in England regard the mother as the guardian of an illegitimate child. ———Proceedings under — Nature of jurisdiction – Interference in appeal.

Proceedings under the Guardians and Wards Act cannot be attacked on the ground of a lack of that formality and precision of procedure which the C. P. Code exacts from a Court in India in a trial of a suit properly so called. The exercise of parental jurisdiction in guardianship matters by a District Judge cannot be guided by hard and fast rules, and if the order passed is on the whole a reasonable one, it will not be interfered with on appeal. The powers conferred upon the District Court by the Guardians and Wards Act are totally dissimilar to its powers as a Court of Ordinary Civil Jurisdiction and so an order purporting to be made under the Act which is not warranted by its provisions cannot be considered as a decree in a suit 36 Cal. 193 ; 24 W.R. 193; 9 All. 191, Dist. The provisions of the Guardians and Wards Act should not be put in force in order to enable a husband to get possession of the person of his wife. (Scott, J.) ASIBAI v. GIRDHARI RAM. 67 I.C. 882 = 8 P.L.J. 293.

———Right of Muhammadan mother to visit her child in the custody of his father as guardian.

There is no machinery under the Guardian of Wards Act to work out the right of the mother, under Muhammadan Law, to visit her child in the custody of the father as guardian. (Rigg, J.) HAZARA BIBI v. SULEIMAN HAJI MOHAMAD. 59 I.C. 562=13 Bur. L.T. 86.

———S. 4—Welfare of minor.

Any friend of the minor can invoke the protection of the Court in case of minor being ill-treated but a stranger must satisfy the Court that the welfare of the minor would be better secured by removing the father from the lawful custody. Thus in castes not permitting widow remarriage where infant girls are married a stranger cannot successfully deprive the father of the custody of the infant daughter who is about to be given in marriage. Appointment.

———Ss. 7 and 17—Appointment cannot be made—Contrary to decree.

An order appointing a husband as guardian of his minor wife cannot be passed in disregard of the Civil Court's decree that he cannot have the custody of her person until she attained majority. (Wilberforce, J.) KHUDA BAKSH v. LAL. 2 Lah. L.J. 509.

———S. 7—Appointment of guardian—Finality of.

———S. 7—Appointment—Minor not entitled to present possession of properties—Court, if may appoint guardian.

Under the Guardians and Wards Act, it is open to a Court to appoint a guardian of the properties of a minor even though, the minor is not entitled to present possession of those properties. Such appointment will not interfere, with the right of the other persons to possession of the properties, as executor or trustee or otherwise. (Oldfield and Ramesam, JJ.) ALWAR AMMAL v. NARAYANA. 70 I.C. 360=14 L.W. 706.

———Ss. 7 and 39—Appointment—Effect—Removal of other guardians.

An appointment of a guardian under S. 7 operates to remove by implication one who has not been appointed in any of the ways mentioned in S. 39. (Abdur Rahim and Kumaraswami Sastri, JJ.) KRISHNAMURTHI AIYAR v. PARVATHI AMMAL. 42 I.C. 505= 6 L.W. 760.

———Ss. 7 (b), 10—Appointment—Dispute about guardianship of minor's property—Duty of Court.

GUARDIANS AND WARDS ACT (VIII of 1890), S. 7—Appointment.

Once the power of the Court is invoked it is its duty as soon as any dispute about the guardianship of the minor's property or any allegation of detriment to the minor's interests resulting from such dispute is properly brought to its notice to set right the matters in the interests of the minor and appoint a proper person as his guardian. (Kotwal, A.J.C.) JIWANDAS v. RAJRANI. 64 I.C. 433.

——S. 7—Appointment—Effect—Removal of natural guardian.

Appointment of guardian of person and property of a minor under the Act means removal of natural guardian. (Drake-Brockman, J.C.) HANNUMAN SINGH v. GANESH PRASAD. 80 I.C. 580.

——Ss. 7 and 8—Appointment of guardians—Application for.

Sections 7 and 8 do not necessarily require that when once proceedings have been instituted on a proper application, application should be taken from the person whom the Court appoints, though certainly in practice it is more usual to take one (Daniels, A.J.C.) MT. ISLAMAN v. MT. MAQBULAN 73 I.C. 255=9 O & A.L.R. 74.

Consideration.

——S. 7—Considerations—Minor to attain majority shortly—Declaration of guardian, whether proper.

Where a minor is to attain majority shortly, the Courts cannot prolong the minor's minority under S. 3 of Indian Majority Act as amended by S. 52, Guardians and Wards Act, by appointing a guardian under S. 7, Guardian and Wards Act. (Lord Parker.) MRS. ANNIE BESANT v. NARAYANIAH. 38 Mad. 607=27 M.L.J. 30=18 C.W.N 1083=1 L.W. 520=(1914) M.W.N. 583=16 M.L.T. 165=20 C.L.J 253=16 Bom. ——S. 7 (3)—Considerations—Will—Not probated—Postponement of decision—Discretion of Court.

In an application for the appointment of a guardian of a minor, the Court has jurisdiction and is bound to consider the fact that there is a will although no probate had been granted in respect of the same. If the validity of the will is in question, it is discretionary with the Court to defer decision of the question of guardianship until the question of probate has been determined. 17 Bom. 560; 16 Mad. 380; 29 Bom. 882, Rel. (Jenkins, C.J. and Woodroffee, J.) AKHOY KUMARI DEBI v. HAZARI DASI DEBI. 42 Cal. 958=28 I.C. 972=19 C.W.N. 513.

——Ss. 7 and 17—Considerations—Husband and wife—Appointment of husband as guardian for wife—Restitution of conjugal rights.

GUARDIANS AND WARDS ACT (VIII of 1890), S. 7—Consideration.

The provisions of the Guardians and Wards Act should not be enforced to enable a husband to get possession of his wife which he has failed to do by execution of the decree obtained by him for restitution of conjugal rights. (Scott-Smith, J.) ASI BAI v. GIRDHARI RAM. 67 I.C. 882 (2)=3 Lah. L.J. 293.

——S. 7—Considerations—Welfare of minor—Duty of Court.

The law does not make it incumbent upon the Court to grant every application for guardianship. The welfare of the minor is the sole criterion in deciding whether a guardian should be appointed or not. Where the dispute is as to the validity of the marriage of the minor and the matter is not free from difficulty, the Court should refer them to a regular suit. (Shadi Lal, J.) KHAGANA v. LAKHMI DAS. 42 I.C. 191=90 P.L.R. 1917.

——Ss. 7 and 8—Considerations—Minor girl in property—Mother to be left undisturbed.

A mother should be left undisturbed as regards the guardianship of her minor girl, where there is no property to be administered by the Court and a statutory guardian is unnecessary. (Johnstone, C.J.) MAHANT DEVI v. MADHO. 84 P.R. 1915=31 I.C. 237=176 P.W.R. 1915.

——Ss. 7 and 17—Considerations—Welfare of minor—Re marriage of mother.

The re-marriage of a mother is not a sufficient reason to deprive her of the custody of her children. The question in cases of guardianship always is, whether it is for the welfare of the minor to appoint a guardian. The Court ought not to accept each and every application made for the appointment of a guardian. (Shadi Lal, J.) FATIMA v. RANI. 101 P.L.R. 1916=28 I.C. 507=36 P.W.R. 1916.

——S. 7—Consideration—Mother living in open adultery—Minor's paternal aunt, if can be appointed.

The appointment of the minor's paternal aunt as guardian is proper when it is proved that the mother is living in open adultery and has borne children of such connection. (Beadon, J.) HARNAMI v. PARTAPI. 30 P.W.R. 1914=23 I.C. 938=67 P.L.R. 1914.

——Ss. 7 and 18—Considerations—Necessity to appoint.

A guardian need not be appointed merely because an application for appointment is made. It should be considered whether it is really necessary to appoint a guardian. When the mother of a minor is managing the affairs of her son properly, no guardian need be appointed. (Robertson, J.) MUSSAMMAT DEOKI v. PAKHAT MAL. 60 P.W.R. 1913=19 I.C. 783=118 P.L.R. 1913.

——S. 7—Considerations—Mother—Proper guardian.

A mother is the proper guardian for the person and property of a minor, until the contrary is proved. An uncle should not be preferred specially when he is seporate and was not on good terms with the minor's father during his lifetime. The fact that one will seek the assistance of her relatives in the management of the property is not objectionable. (Kensington, J.) PARTAP KUAR v. JWALASHAT.

62 P.L.R. 1913=19 I C. 438=12 P.W.R. 1913.

——Ss. 7, 17 and 21—Considerations—Welfare of minor—Will of minor—Appointment of a guardian for minor—Matters to be considered in making an order.

An order of appointment of a guardian to a minor can only be made on the sole ground of welfare of the minor; the Court cannot go against the will of the minor, especially when he is old enough to form an intelligent opinion. (Rattigan and Chevis, JJ.) BHAGVANA v. RAM CHAND. 231 P.L.R. 1911=11 I.C. 478=196 P.W.R. 1911.

——Ss. 7 and 25—Considerations—Father's right to custody—Arrangement with mother—Effect.

Where there is nothing established against a father except that he and his wife are on bad terms and living apart, he is entitled to the custody of his child. The fact that he at one time agreed to allow the child to remain with the mother is immaterial as it is a revocable agreement. (Oldfield and Venkatasubba Rao JJ.) SRI RAJA BOMMDEVARA SATYANARAYANA v. NARASIMMA. 18 L W. 173=(1923) M.W.N. 668=1924 Mad. 45.

——S. 7 (1)—Considerations—Welfare of minor—Appointment of guardian by Court—Welfare of minor, the only criterion.

Where an application is made under the Act the only question to be considered under S. 7 (2) is whether it is for welfare of the minor, that an order should be made and whether a particular person should be made his guardian according to his personal law, is an irrelevant point. (Sadasiva Aiyer and Moore, JJ.) DURGAMMA v. LINGAPPA. 33 I C 77=19 M L.T. 294.

——S 7—Considerations — Rights of mother—Wishes of relatives.

Where no charge of waste or mismanagement had been proved, the mere desire of the relatives of the minor is not a sufficient reason for depriving the widowed mother of the minor of her recognised claim to be the guardian of her minor child's property. (Kotwal, A.J.C.) MT. LAXMIBAI v. ABDUL KADIR.
68 I.C. 474.

——Ss. 7, 17 and 19 (b)—Consideration—Welfare of minor—Fitness of natural guardian—Power of Court to inquire into—Conversion of father to Islam—Effect.

A Court can both in equity and under the Act interfere with the legal rights of guardianship of the parents. The welfare of the children should primarily be considered. The GUARDIANS AND WARDS ACT (VIII of 1890), S. 7—Enquiry.

Court should ascertain what could be for the welfare of the minors, whether any of them was sufficiently advanced to make an intelligent preference, what means were at the disposal of such parents to provide for them in future and whether the father would under the altered circumstances be able to provide a fit home for his children. If the father is not able to provide a fit home he should be held to be not fit to be the guardian. Per Crouch, A.J.C.:—The provisions of the Act are in no way limited by the English Practice. English decisions cannot be considered to have any authority in India when dealing with a conflict between Hinduism and Islam. Change of religion by itself does not necessarily render a father unfit to be the guardian of his minor children. Ss. 17 and 19 of the Act must be read together.—Quaere:—Whether the general rule that a child should follow the religion of the father could apply without qualification to a case where the religion has been newly adopted by the father and is not that in which the child was born or reared. (Hayward, J. C. and Crouch, A.J.C.) RADHI BAI v. D. R. VASANMAL.
41 I.C. 571=11 S.L.R. 17.

Enquiry.

——Ss. 7 and 13—Enquiry—Application under—Courts, duty of.

A Court dealing with an application under the Act should not dispose of the matter in the absence of the applicant by making an order in favour of his opponent as though the absent person were a defaulter in a Civil suit. In determining whether a person is a minor the Court should take an independent view of its own and not adopt a finding in some Civil suit that that person is a minor. (Walsh and Ryves, JJ.) RAM SAHAI v. CHHOTEY LAL.
19 A.L J. 489=63 I C. 567=3 U.P.L.R. (All.) 105.

——S. 7—Enquiry under — Summary, nature of.

S. 7 contemplates only a summary inquiry followed by an order for the welfare of the minor, and not elaborate inquiries whether the property left by the deceased was joint or self-acquired. When an application is made on the footing and with the claim that the minor is separately entitled to separate property, the Court should appoint a proper person as guardian of his property leaving it to the guardian to institute suits for the recovery of the property claimed. ——S. 7—Enquiry—Summary of.

The proceedings under S. 7 of the Guardians and Wards Act are summary. The Judge has to make such enquiry as he thinks necessary to satisfy his mind, and has got unfettered discretion in the number of witnesses to be examined, length of cross-examination etc. (Kincaid, J.C.) BIBI FATMA v. BAKARSHAH. 65 I.C. 888=13 S.L.R. 175.

Where no guardian for the person or property of a minor was necessary and a master instigated his servant who was the grandfather of the minor to make an application for appointing himself as the guardian so that the minor may be married to his son, it was held that it was not a bona fide judicial proceeding and orders made thereon were wholly without jurisdiction. ——Ss. 7 and 47 (a)—Security by guardian—Conditional and final orders of appointment—Appeal.

An application for the appointment of a guardian for the minor's property was made on which the Court passed an order appointing the mother as guardian and directing her to furnish security within two weeks of the date of the order. After such security was furnished and accepted the Court issued a final order of appointment. An appeal was preferred against the final order alone. Held, that the first order was only preliminary and conditional and did not take effect till the security was furnished and that the final order was the only order appointing the mother as guardian under S. 7. An appeal against the latter order was, therefore, maintainable. (Spencer and Krishnan, JJ.) SANGAYYA THEVAN v. PETAMMAL. 35 I.C. 513=11 L.W. 377.

A Hindu father appointed the deft., an English lady, as guardian of the persons of his minor sons on the offer of the deft. to take them to Europe and educate them in England. Subsequently the father cancelled the arrangement and demanded his children back. On the defendant's refusal to do so, the father instituted a suit in the Chingleput District Court for a declaration that he was entitled to the custody and guardianship of his sons and for an order directing the deft. to hand them over to him. The suit was transferred under cl. 13 of the Letters Patent to the High Court of Madras which granted a decree as prayed for. Held, that the suit was entirely misconceived and should be dismissed. The District Court has no jurisdiction over infants except such as is conferred by Guardians and Wards Act. The jurisdiction of the District Court is limited by S. 9 of the Act to infants ordinarily resident within the District and the minors in question having left India months prior to the proceedings were not ordinarily resident in the District. A suit inter partes is not the form of procedure prescribed by S. 10 of the Guardians and Wards Act for proceedings touching the guardianship of infants. Semble: The powers of the Madras High Court to which the suit was subsequently transferred under cl. 13 of the Letters Patent, relating to the case would be those which but for the transfer might have been exercised by the District Court. Even if the High Court had any jurisdiction with regard to minors beyond that exercisable by the District Court a mandatory order directing the deft. to deliver possession of the minors ought not to have been made since any attempt to enforce it would expose the deft. to habeas corpus proceedings in England and also because the minors were not represented before the Court and no steps were taken to ascertain their wishes and interests. The order of the High Court declaring one of the infants who was soon to attain majority, a ward of Court and then declaring the plff. as their guardian under S. 7 so as to prolong his minority without consulting the infant's wishes and when the plff. was a fit person to be the guardian opposed to S. 19 of the Guardians and Wards Act. ——Ss. 17 and 19—Father—Guardianship—Second marriage.

The fact that the father has married a second wife is not a sufficient ground for holding that he is unfit to be the guardian of his children in the absence of proof of ill-treatment by the father or the step-mother. Th the first wife was not properly treated, is not a ground for presuming that the children will not be properly looked after. The Legislature advisedly draws a distinction between the legal rights of husband and parents on the one side and those of the other near relations on the other side. The former could be deprived of the right of guardianship only when they are found to be unfit to be guardians and the latter when it does not conduce to the welfare of the minor. S. 19 applies to the former case and S. 17 applies to the latter case. (Seshagiri Aiyar and Napier, JJ.) ——S. 17—Welfare of minor—Father's wishes.

Under S. 17 of the Act the question of guardianship has to be decided with reference to all the considerations mentioned in the section and where it is positively injurious to give effect to a father's wishes, the Court will interfere even in his life time. ——S. 17—Considerations — Management of business—Purdanashin lady — Security — Remuneration.

The mere fact that an applicant is a purdanashin lady is no ground for rejecting her claim to be appointed guardian of the property of a minor. Where however the minor's estate owns a big business which could not be managed by a woman of the status of the applicant without an assistant, that may be a ground for appointing another person as guardian. Where an appellate Court considers the advisability of the appointment of a particular person as guardian it may take into consideration also the questions of the remuneration that will have to be paid to him as well as the security which he is likely to furnish. ——S. 17—Paternal uncles as maternal uncles—Hindu Law

The paternal uncles are, under the Hindu law preferential guardians to maternal uncles, but if the former claim an interest in the minor's property adverse to the minor, they are not entitled to the custody of the minor under the Guardians and Wards Act. S. 19 recognises the natural rights of the father and is controlled by S. 17 according to which the paramount consideration is the welfare of the minor. A Hindu father's conversion does not operate to deprive him of the guardianship of his children by reason of Act, (XXI of 1850). Nor his conversion per se reason for the Court to declare the father unfit, for the Court cannot say that one religion is better than the other. (Pratt and Crouch, A.J, Cs.) Under S. 17 (1) of the Guardians and Wards Act the Court is bound to take the Mahomedan Law into consideration in deciding as to who is to be selected as a guardian for minor Mahomedan. The husband is the most unsuitable guardian for a girl who has not attained the age of puberty. It is desirable that the guardian of the person should also be the guardian of the property. Under the Mahomedan Law the mother is a preferential guardian over a paternal uncle of a boy who is under 7 years of age and even if he is above seven, the Court, which takes the place of a father, can appoint the mother in preference to the paternal uncle as the guardian. An application by a Hindu father under S. 19 of the Guardians and Wards Act is not competent. The application should be under S. 25 of the Act asking the Court to direct the return of the boy to the father. Under the Hindu Law the father is the natural guardian of his minor son and he can apply to the Court, if his ward leaves or is removed from his custody, for an order for the minor's return, and the Court will, if it is of opinion that it will be for the welfare of the ward to return to his guardian, make such an order. ———S. 19 — Scope of — Appointment of guardian—Father.

Where the parties to a case are not European British subjects, S. 19 of the Guardians and Wards Act lays down in clear and unmistakable terms that the Court is not authorised to appoint or declare a guardian of the person of a minor whose father is living, unless that father is unfit to be a guardian. There is no reason to suppose that an application by the father himself was intended to be excepted from the provisions of the section. The view of the legislature presumably is that the father is the natural guardian and does not require appointment. (Brown, A.J.C.) RAMJAN KHAN v. MABIAN BIBI. 4 U.B.R. 146 = 1923 Rang. 120.

———Ss. 20, 27 and 39—Guardian dealing with ward's money—Investment—Duty to account for profits—Breach of trust.

A guardian stands in a fiduciary relation to his ward and is not allowed to make any profit out of his office; and he is bound to deal with the property of the ward as carefully as a man of ordinary prudence would do. If the ward's moneys were used by the guardian in his business, the latter would be bound to account for the profits he had made out of the use of that money or could have made but for his gross or wilful default. Every plain neglect of duty by a guardian amounts to a breach of trust and he must compensate his ward for any loss occasioned thereby. Prima facie it is the duty of a guardian to invest moneys belonging to his ward and S. 33 of the Act provides means by which a guardian may obtain assistance of the Court in his dealings with his ward's funds. Subsequently the certificated guardian sold the property with the sanction of the Court under S. 29 of the Guardians and Wards Act. Held, that the first sale was voidable at the option of the subsequent transferee but the subsequent transferee can get back the property only on his reimbursing the prior transferee whose money had benefited the minor. 3 C.L.J. 260, Ref. Under S. 30 of the Guardians and Wards Act disposal of immoveable property by a guardian in contravention of Ss. 28 and 29 is voidable and could be set aside in a proper proceeding. Where therefore a person seeks to avoid it, he is in the position of a person who seeks equity and must do equity. The sanction obtained under O. 21, R. 83, C.P.C. does not cure the defect arising on account of the want of sanction under S. 29 of Guardians and Wards Act. The scope of an enquiry under S. 29 of the Guardians and Wards Act is entirely distinct from the scope of an enquiry under O. 21, R. 83, C.P. Code. When an application is made under S. 29 of the Guardians and Wards Act to a District Judge to sanction a proposed alienation, the matter to be considered is the benefit of the infant. When an application is made to an execution Court to sanction an intended transfer under O. 21, R. 83, C.P.C., the matter for enquiry is the protection of the execution creditor. Compliance with the provisions of O. 21, R. 83, C. P. ———Ss. 31 and 48—Sale of minor's property—Sanction of Court — Misrepresentation and fraud of guardian—Suit to set aside sale by minor—What must be shown.

A suit to set aside a sale of a minor's property made on his behalf during his minority with the sanction of the District Judge by his certified guardian, cannot be maintained successfully unless it can be shown that the Judge's order was illegal or that the sale was not in conformity with that order, or that the proceedings were vitiated by fraud on the part of the purchaser. Fraud and misrepresentation on the part of the guardian does not render the sale illegal unless it is shown that the purchaser was privy to the fraud or at least was aware of it. ———S. 31 (2)—Sanction cannot cure inherent defects—Suit by minor to set aside the sale—Onus.

Per Spencer, J.—Sanction of court given under S. 31 of the Guardians and Wards Act will not cure inherent defects that may exist in a sale by a guardian. It is only prima facie evidence that the transaction was a good one and the minor may at any future time have it set aside on the ground that it was fraudulent or improper, the burden of proof being in the first instance on the minor. Per Ramesam, J.—The true rule as to the effect of the sanction is that it throws the onus on the minor to show that the alienation was improperly made contrary to the usual rule requiring the purchaser to establish the validity of the alienation or that he acted with due care and caution after making such enquiry as an honest and prudent man would make. It is not necessary for the minor seeking to impeach the transaction to make out fraud on the part of the purchaser. Per Spencer, J.—Where the order granting sanction for a sale by a guardian did not recite the necessity for the same but simply ran thus :—"In the circumstances, the sale of 9 acres in full satisfaction of the mortgage debt is sanctioned," held, that the order did not comply with S. 31 (2) of the Act. ———S. 31 (2)—Permission to sell—Necessity not mentioned—Effect—Section imperative.

S. 31 (2) is mandatory and not merely directory. An order which failed to recite the necessity for the advantage of, the transfers is not a legal order and cannot be pleaded as sufficient sanction for a sale by the guardian. (Lindsay, J.C.) BANKEY LAL v. SWAMI DAYAL.

———S. 31 (3) (a)—Bona fide sale of minor's property—Conditions precedent and subsequent.

Where the District Judge acting under the Guardians and Wards Act empowers the guardian to sell a property of the minors for an alleged debt of theirs and further directs him to put in the bonds after these have been satisfied and so endorsed by the creditor, it does not follow that non-compliance with the latter direction makes the sale invalid if actully carried out and the vendee has all along been in possession of the purchased property. Where the same property is held partly by adult co-sharers and partly by minors, the very fact that the minor's share was sold for a price a little over that for which the shares of adult co-owners was sold goes to indicate the bona fides of the sales of the shares of the minors.
